NO MAN can guess what power to speak well over the radio may mean in years to come.

Last Monday night bridge parties laid down their cards, women on farms stopped the late cleaning up of dishes, their husbands came in from evening chores, tens of millions listened to the President's clear, incisive, matter-of-fact voice, discussing in plain fashion the importance of national economies and laying down, to the satisfaction of every hearer, the simple truth that the people's money belongs to the people, that they ought to be allowed to spend as much of their own money as possible, and have as little as possible taken away from them by the government.

THUS PRESIDENT COOLIDGE now talks direct to the people of the United States. It was an innovation when Woodrow Wilson, so perfectly dressed, drove to the Capitol and talked direct to Senators, Representatives, the Supreme Court and others.

"Wonderful audience," the world said.

But it was no audience at all compared to the vast multitude that heard President Coolidge talk direct to the people of the United States.

For the first time in the history of this country it is possible to say of a President that all the people have heard his voice and know him.

SEVEN WORDS in the thirty-seventh verse of the twelfth chapter of St. Mark stand out in the minds of millions:

"And the common people heard him gladly."

Great and ever growing is the power of those to whose voices the people listen gladly, as to one whom they know.

A MAN in public office, with something to say, and with "the air," the opportunity to be heard by all at his command, can build for himself a place in the people's confidence and affection that cannot be taken away from him. His words go to the people; no intermediary.

PRESIDENT COOLIDGE, as millions can testify, speaks with no effort at oratorical effect, plainly, swiftly, keeping his gigantic audience from their bridge whist, or their chores, as few minutes as possible.

BISHOP OLDHAM, of Albany, invited to speak at Westminster Abbey, and perhaps a little flustered by the honor, said various things that he will think over when he gets back. He apologized for the United States. He regretted that this country had not done its duty by Europe, flattered the British unctuously, and said, "Multitudes of people in America were terribly disappointed—to put it mildly—at the inactivity of the American government."

THAT'S ONE KIND of an American clergyman talking to the English. Another kind was Henry Ward Beecher, who went over to arouse sympathy for the North, in our Civil War.

He was not as well received as the Bishop of Albany, perhaps because he carried with him a higher opinion of his own country and his own countrymen than the one taken over by the bishop.

IN LIVERPOOL, when Beecher spoke they threw eggs and hissed him. A man in the crowd shouted: "We thought you Yankees were such great fighters. How long is this war of yours going to last?"

Beecher replied: "I can't answer your question. When we fought you Englishmen in 1776, it didn't last long. That was easy, because then we were only fighting Englishmen.

"But this time we are fighting Americans, and there is no telling HOW long that may last."

THE BRITISH crowd applauded, and listened, and dereI...

SWAMPSCOTT WELCOMES COOLIDGE

President Arrives Tired But Happy

NAVY THREAT TO ABANDON MacMILLAN

COOLIDGE GRINS AS SALEM CROWD CHEERS

This is an unusual picture of President Coolidge, caught by a staff photographer from the Boston Evening American, while the Presidential Party was waiting at the Salem station this morning. The President is more than smiling—he's actually grinning—in anticipation of his vacation, which Mrs. Coolidge says he needs, and lobster dinners, which he admits he likes. Just back of the President is Mrs. Frank W. Stearns, then come Mrs. Coolidge, Senator William H. Butler and Mr. Stearns, the latter at the extreme left. The President wore a light tan "hot day" suit and a Summery tie. He looked "all washed and ironed," as someone remarked.

THRONGS CHEER PARTY AT SALEM; MARINES BAR ALL VISITORS

Casting aside cares of State, President and Mrs. Calvin Coolidge, after an enthusiastic welcome at Salem, settled down at Swampscott today for a Summer vacation.

Forced to run the gauntlet of cheering thousands when they left the Presidential special, Mr. and Mrs. Coolidge were shortly enjoying the peaceful atmosphere of Red Gables, the Summer home of Mr. and Mrs. Frank W. Stearns, where they are to remain until tomorrow evening.

After enjoying an informal breakfast and a cigar, the President announced he would receive the newspapermen at 4 o'clock, at which time he was to issue a statement covering the arrival.

At Salem station, where the party transferred to automobiles, the President and Mrs. Coolidge smiled and bowed their acknowledgements of the applause, and President Coolidge thanked the throng for their reception.

Mr. and Mrs. Coolidge were the recipients of many beautiful floral gifts, some being presented along the line and others at Red Gables. Those who called in person were asked to leave their bouquets, as the grounds were closed to all visitors, with the Marines on guard at all points.

The presidential special arrived at Salem on schedule at 8 o'clock, having been for some three hours, unknown and unnoted, on a siding at West Peabody.

The first to extend greetings were representatives of the Boston Evening American, who with police guards were the only ones aware of the significance of the quiet train.

Even the station agent, Harry W.

MYSTERY PLANE AT RUM ROW

A mystery seaplane that left Revere and was seen over Stellwagen bank, twenty miles east of Boston, for hours later, only to disappear strangely, was being sought today by Coast Guard boats and other craft. The plane rose from Revere at 2 p. m. yesterday.

An appeal for vessels to watch for the seaplane was radioed by the navy and commercial stations today. The radio appeal said:

"Seaplane left Revere Beach 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon. Was seen over Stellwagen Bank 6 p. m. and she is now missing. Keep good lookout."

The Coast Guard cutter Mojave was dispatched to scour for the seaplane. Captain P. H. Cherroth, division commander of the Coast Guard, said he had been requested to have his other patrol boats keep a watch out for the plane.

Stellwagen Bank is the location of Boston's Rum Row. It is a long strip of shoal lying half way between Provincetown and Gloucester and approximately twenty miles east into the water from Boston.

REVEALS LAWSON DIED PENNILESS

The late Thomas W. Lawson, financier, author and gentleman farmer, not only died penniless but had been supported for the last year or two of his life chiefly by one of his daughters, Mrs. Marion L. Lord of No. 281 St. Paul street, Brookline.

This became known today, when Judson Hamligan appeared before Judge William M. Prest in Suffolk Probate Court, seeking the appointment of the financier's two sons as administrators. They are Arnold Lawson of No. 30 Capen street, Milton, and Douglas Lawson of No. 25 Pinckney street, Boston.

The four daughters, Jeanne Chandler Lawson Edwards, No. 281 St. Paul street, Brookline; Gladys Lawson Stanwood of Scituate, Marion Lawson Lord of Brookline and Dorothy Lawson McCall of Redmond, Ore., consented to the appointment.

'M'MILLAN MUST OBEY ORDER,' NAVY'S EDICT

(Copyright, 1925, by the Boston Evening American.)
(Reproduction in Full or in Part Expressly Prohibited.)

Secretary of the Navy Wilbur has confirmed the story carried exclusively by the Boston Evening American today to the effect that differences of opinion have arisen between himself and Donald B. MacMillan, which are likely to lead to the recall of American naval officers and men from MacMillan's expedition into the Frozen North.

He already has given the order that these navy men withdraw unless MacMillan agrees to take standard naval wireless with him in place of his own specially constructed low-wave radio outfit.

The destroyer Putnam is on its way from Wiscasset, Me., to Sydney, N. S., to catch up with the MacMillan expedition, offer the naval wireless equipment and present the Secretary's ultimatum.

Withdrawal of the navy men and the probable withdrawal of all the equipment they have furnished is

PHONE RATE INCREASE HALTED TO AUGUST 1

Telephone rate increases, which were to have gone in force on July 1, were suspended until August 1 today by order of the Public Utilities Commission.

The increases reach the grand total of $12,000,000 a year, statisticians say.

They were to have become effective in January, but were then suspended to give the city of Boston and others a chance to protest. The hearings and protests are not yet completed.

MISSING DRUGGIST FOUND UNCONSCIOUS

Missing for two weeks, Frank Braconer, a former druggist, was found unconscious today in a doorway in the rear of No. 112 Brook street, Brighton. Braconer is in St. Elizabeth's Hospital. His name is on the danger list.

At first he was not identified. Eventually his identity was established by his brother, Harry Braconer, of Brockton, who was in Boston seeking the missing man, thinking he might be the Franklin Park shooting and drowning victim. Frank Braconer is thirty years old.

WARSHIP SPEEDS TO INTERCEPT M'MILLAN DASH INTO ARCTIC

bertain to hamper and likely to cripple the expedition.

"It must be understood," Secretary Wilbur told a Boston Evening American correspondent today, "that Lieutenant-Commander Richard E. Byrd and the other naval officers accompanying MacMillan, are not loaned to MacMillan for the expedition, but are working in conjunction with him and will be under the direct supervision of the Navy Department at all times.

"Our experts believe that the navy equipment used on the battleship Florida, being of standard design, will serve our purposes better than that which MacMillan wants to use. In fact, he agreed with us that he would use the navy's equipment.

"Twice, however, the expedition has pulled out from Maineg orts without taking this equipment, first at Boston and again at Wiscasset.

"My messages to Commander Byrd concerning this equipment went unanswered, until I finally sent him a peremptory order either to take this navy radio equipment and use it or to return to the United States.

"I anticipate that there will be some action now and that the upshot of the matter will be that Commander MacMillan will accept our equipment, which we believe to be much better suited to use in the Far North."

Secretary Wilbur also stated to the Boston Evening American that he ordered the destroyer Putnam to Sydney, N. S., to overtake the MacMillan expedition and deliver the disputed equipment.

The steamer Peary of the MacMillan outfit is already in Sydney, and the Bowdoin, a schooner, bearing MacMillan himself and some of his most trusted lieutenants, will arrive today.

The Putnam, loaded with the radio apparatus taken from the dismantled U. S. S. Florida, will not reach Sydney, in all probability, before Friday.

It was MacMillay's original plan to sail from Sydney Friday, so that it would be among the possibilities for the navy destroyer and the Arctic expedition to just miss each other.

Naval officers in Boston, however, inclined to the opinion today that the Secretary would get in touch with his subordinates aboard the Bowdoin and the Peary by telegram or wireless.

Radio is the bone of contention. Wilbur is standing for the use of standard navy equipment. He says any other would not be serviceable and would needlessly imperil the lives of the seamen assigned to the expedition.

MacMillan, a narctic explorer of long experience, wants to use the lowwave wireless constructed by his own radio chief, John L. Reinartz.

RADIO OUT OF ORDER.

When the Peary was last heard from, her radio was out of order, which may have some bearing on the misunderstanding; it is understood that Secretary Wilbur and Commander MacMillan have not had that direct communication so necessary to agreement.

The Peary reached Sydney with all on board well, according to a wire.

Wilbur's order to naval officers with the MacMillan outfit to return unless the commander meets his conditions are described in telegrams from Washington as peremptory.

According to the same telegrams, Wilbur is still confident that MacMillan will weaken and take the radio prescribed without further parley.

Leaving Boston last week, MacMillan was greeted at Wiscasset, Me., by navy men, who ordered him to take navy radio equipment aboard.

Without fuss or feathers, the presiding genius of this latest attempt to wrest its secrets from the Arctic sailed away from Wiscasset, leaving the navy stuff stacked upon the pier.

It is understood that somebody blundered at that time and did not make him understand that the navy chief was delivering an ultimatum—no navy radio, no navy men or property for the jaunt into Icebergland.

Soon after his return from his last expedition to the Arctic, Commander MacMillan announced that in the future he would use only low wave length radio equipment. These sets are practically impervious to static, which is extremely bad near the Pole. On his last expedition, the MacMillan party was out of communication with the outside world for weeks at a time.

Second to MacMillan in command of the expedition is Commander E. F. McDonald, Chicago multi-millionaire and interested in the Zenith Radio Corporation of Chicago. This radio company, some time since, worked out the best standards for the amateur manufacture of low wave-length radio sets. In tests, these amateur sets, during mid-day communicated with Europe, with ease, while in addition, the sets were light, A sending and receiving set with batteries complete weighing less than 100 pounds.

These low wave sets never have been manufactured commercially, it is understood. Commander MacMillan and Commander McDonald regarded the low wave sets as ideal for work in the Arctic, and accordingly, the two ships, Bowdoin and Peary and the three navy amphibious planes were equipped with instruments of this type.

The order to Lieutenant Commander Byrd failed to reach that officer before the Polar party left and as a result the navy radio sets were left unprotected on the pier, until they were picked up again by the Putnam, which had been ordered to return there from Charlestown, Mass.

ARGUMENT RENEWED.

A renewal of the tiff between MacMillan, Commander McDonald and the navy department is promised when Secretary Wilbur's commands are made known to the heads of the Polar expedition.

Throughout yesterday afternoon and last night efforts were made to get in touch with the Peary by navy wireless from Washington and other naval stations along the coast, it was learned here. The aid of powerful commercial stations also was invoked.

But because of the low-wave lengths of the Peary's sets this was found to be impossible and an appeal finally was made to Charles Ferguson of Detroit, amateur operator of a 40-meter wavelength station in an effort to reach the Peary with Secretary Wilbur's message to Lieutenant-Commander Byrd.

The officer in charge of the Portland naval station has been ordered to report to Rear-Admiral de Steiguer at Charlestown, in person, it is learned, for his part in the affair.

Secretary Wilbur bases his strenuous objections to the low-wave length radio equipment on the grounds of insecurity for the ships, planes and entire personnel it is stated.

FEAR MENACE.

Flying high and far away from the mother ships and over the frozen fields on ice the lives of the aviators and pilots—indeed the safety of the entire MacMillan party might be at stake, naval officers declare, because of the lack of facilities for obtaining radio compass bearings if the low wave sets are used, it is charged.

Navy radio men point out that if any of the fliers become lost in the icy barrens near the Pole, word of their plight might easily reach the Bowdoin or Peary or the base at Etah, if the planes are navy equipped with radio, and sufficient power could be maintained to operate them.

The navy sets are operated on high wave lengths. They emit the obsolete so-called "spark" wave, whereas the low wave sets are a continuous wave.

The sets favored by MacMillan for this expedition are entirely self contained and weigh only eighty-seven pounds, including batteries. Both receiver and transmitter are in the same cabinet and the novel part of the transmitter is that it utilizes but one 201-A receiving tube.

With similar sets two way transAtlantic, daytime communication has been achieved with a tiny fraction of the power needed in long wave sets.

Commander McDonald has explained the proposed arrangements for radio communication as made by Commander MacMillan, Radio Engineer John L. Reinartz and himself as follows:

Chief Operator Reinartz will be stationed on the Bowdoin, while Paul McGee, engineer of the Zenith Radio Corporation, will be second operator aboard the Peary.

For communication with points in the United States it was planned to employ two wave lengths—twenty and forty meters. McDonald said that these two wave lengths are used to afford a choice among receiving stations here, as the Polar expedition will be in daylight during the whole trip. It appears the twenty meters will be used the hours of daylight here and the forty meter wave while it is night here. But now the Navy Department frowns on the use of the short wave length sets and demands substitution of the high lengths for the safety of all concerned.

Word as to the attitude of MacMillan and Commander McDonald toward the ultimatum from Secretary Wilbur is anxiously awaited, not only here in Maine, but all over the United States.

DISABLED VETS ARE PLEDGED 'SERVICE'

Hines Tells Conventiin He Will Ask Congress for Better Hospitalization

Omaha, June 24 (A.P.)—With "service" as a slogan, the Veterans' Bureau is seeking to perfect an organization of fewer, better paid and more efficient employes to carry out the liberal features of the new Veterans' Act, director Frank T. Hines said today in a prepared address before the fifth annual convention of the Disabled American Veterans of the World War.

Director Hines reviewed the benefits derived from changes in the Veterans' Act and asserted it had been and would continue to be the policy of the bureau to employ in key positions properly qualified ex-service men and women.

Morale, he said, will be encouraged "through attempting to place personnel in positions according to their fitness and through recognition of individual endeavor."

To guarantee the permanency of medical service to disabled veterans, Director Hines said Congress would again be asked to establish a permanent medical staff for the bureau. He declared it to be essential if the government was to get full value for investment of more than $64,000,000 in hospital construction, that "we place in the hospitals the type of professional personnel to run them in keeping with their character."

'My Order Peremptory,' Wilbur Asserts

Statement of Secretary of the Navy Wilbur to the Boston Evening American today:

It must be understood that Lieutenant-Commander Richard E. Byrd and the other naval officers accompanying MacMillan, are not loaned to MacMillan for the expedition, but are working in conjunction with him and will be under the direct supervision of the Navy Department at all times.

Our experts believe that the navy equipment used on the battleship Florida, being of standard design, will serve our purpose better than that which MacMillan wants to use. In fact, he agreed with us that he would use the navy's equipment.

Twice, however, the expedition has pulled out from New England ports without taking this equipment, first at Boston and again at Wiscasset.

My messages to Commander Byrd concerning this equipment went unanswered, until I finally sent him a peremptory order either to take this navy radio equipment and use it or to return to the United States.

I anticipate that there will be some action now and that the upshot of the matter will be that Commander MacMillan will accept our equipment, which we believe to be much better suited to use in the far North.

Britain Warns China to Keep Out of Shameen

Hongkong, June 24 (A.P.)—The British consul-general at Canton, it is learned, sent a note to the Canton government, prior to yesterday's shooting incident, warning the Chinese authorities that any attempt to penetrate Shameen, the foreign settlement, would be resisted by force and that the government would be held responsible for the consequences.

The Consul General said he had learned that student elements intended "making martyrs of themselves by attacking the bridges leading to Shameen," and added:

"I write this in a serious strain so that it may not be said hereafter that brutal imperialist rifles wantonly massacred unoffending Chinese youths."

Five hundred British and other foreign women and children left Shameen, the foreign quarter of Canton, at 8 o'clock this morning aboard the British steamer Honam for Hongkong.

The arrivals today included A. H. W. Edwards, who was shot in the right knee yesterday when Chinese demonstrators fired in the direction of the foreign settlement; V. G. Murrell, who was shot in the right shoulder, and Miss ess Charles Lammert, who was injured in the left foot.

A detachment of British Indian troops left today for Shameen, the foreign section of Canton, as a precautionary measure.

Navy Chases M'Millan to Switch Radio

By the Associated Press.

The destroyer Putnam, which left Wiscasset, Me., to overtake the MacMillan Arctic expedition, is carrying navy radio equipment for installation aboard the steamer Bowdoin and the schooner Peary, which will insure satisfactory communication with the three naval planes, it was learned at the Navy Yard here today.

Rear-Admiral Louis De Steiguer, commandant of the First Naval District, said that the equipment, which had been sent by the Navy from Boston to Wiscasset by motor truck, had been left behind on the dock by the expedition. The expedition was unable to load everything aboard when it sailed, he said, and this was left behind.

The purpose of sending the Navy long-wave equipment, he added, was to insure "better communication between the planes and the ships."

The MacMillan expedition arrived last night at Sydney, N. S.

BUILDING UNION AGENTS HALT STRIKE PLAN

Proposal for 20,000 to Join Laborers Referred to New Meeting Friday

Building operations in Greater Boston, involving more than $30,000,000, are threatened with a complete tieup by a strike of the 23,000 building trades workers.

The 20,000 skilled artisans employed on building operations in Greater Boston are planning to go out on a sympathetic strike with the 5,000 laborers who have been on strike for some weeks in an effort to secure an increase in wages.

The adjustment board of the Building Trades Council, which includes the business agents of all building trades unions, met at No. 386 Harrison avenue today and, after long discussion, voted to refer the matter of further action possibly on a general strike, to next Friday evening's meeting of the Building Trades Council.

The strike, which would paralyze building operations, threatens at a time when it seemed a three-year peace in the building trades of Greater Boston was assured.

One after another, the building trades unions signed three-year agreements with the representatives of the Building Trades Employers' Association. These agreements were all identical—the union men agreeing to work for the next year at the old wage scale while the question of pay increases in 1926 and 1927, would be arbitrated.

The employers also agreed, in signing such contract, that no additional advantages would be offered other trades unions.

The farmers that raised potatoes on the average actually lost money, and would have been better off if they hadn't planted a potato.

A good wheat speculator, knowing that the prosperous class wanted La Follette badly beaten, and was sure to put up the price of wheat, could easily buy a million bushels of wheat early in the campaign and sell it at a profit of one million dollars.

It was a lucky farmer that could raise five thousand bushels of wheat, and sell it at a profit of one thousand dollars.

Some of that money that President Coolidge and Secretary Mellon are going to save might well be spent wiping out disease deserts and swamps on Uncle Sam's great farm.

LEAD DAY'S NUPTIAL EVENTS IN HUB

2 HUB COUPLES ARE MARRIED TODAY

Wedding bells pealed forth today for two Boston couples, one marriage taking place in Dorchester and the other in Brookline.

At St. Margaret's Church, Dorchester, John A. Sullivan of No. 8 Elder street, one of Mayor Curley's secretaries, was married to Miss Alice G. Tucker of No. 27 Pleasant street, both of Dorchester.

The Brookline wedding, that of Miss Katherine A. McCarthy of Hurd road, and Carl Untersee, son of P. Joseph Untersee, the architect, of Davis avenue, Brookline, was solemnized in St. Mary's of the Assumption Church.

The Rev. Leo E. Sullivan performed the Sullivan ceremony. The bridesmaid was Miss Alice Sullivan, sister of the bride. The best man was Albert Carey, of the Soldiers' Relief Department at City Hall.

Mayor Curley presented a vase to the couple and associates of the bridegroom in the Mayor's office presented him a purse of gold.

A wedding breakfast was served at the home of the bride and then the couple departed on a wedding trip. They will live in Dorchester.

At the McCarthy-Untersee wedding, the nuptial mass was celebrated by the Rev. Bernard S. O'Kane, assistant pastor of St. Mary's. The bride was given in marriage by her brother, John J. McCarthy, a sister, Julia McCarthy, was maid of honor. Phillip Untersee of Newark, N. J., a brother of the bridegroom, was best man.

A wedding breakfast was served and a reception took place at Hotel Westminster. Mr. and Mrs. Untersee will reside temporarily in Brookline.

Among the weddings in Boston today was that of Miss Alice Tucker and John Sullivan (shown above). Inset is Miss Katherine A. McCarthy, who became the bride of Carl Untersee.

MOTIVE SOUGHT IN SUICIDE OF MALDEN BOY

Motive for the suicide of Girard Homer Tibbetts, 17-year-old Malden High School boy, who was found dead in the bath tub in his home, at No. 81 Dexter street, with the gas in the room turned on, has baffled the police.

The boy was found by his mother, Mrs. Annie Tibbetts, a widow, when she returned home after attending a moving picture show.

Finding the front door locked on the inside, she summoned another son, who forced the door. She smelt gas and traced it to the bath room where she found her son's body.

She could give no reason for her son's act. He stood well up in his classes in school and he apparently had no worries. She believes his health might have become impaired by over-study.

The boy was planning to enter Harvard in the Fall after a tour of duty with the R. O. T. C. at Camp Devens this Summer.

Paris Clamps Lid on Arts Ball After Wildest Night

MAD REVEL RIVAL TO BABYLON

Scenes of Drunken Abandon Never Equalled; the Effect on Foreign Element Regretted

Paris, June 24 (Universal Cable).—After the wildest night in the annals even of the Latin quarter, Paris awoke late to find that this year's Four Arts Ball will probably be the last.

Without even waiting for the revelers to be cured of their headaches, the French Morality League, which was formed last week to clean up Paris, sent out a broadside today denouncing the affair as a "saturnalia disgracing the name of French civilization," and calling on the authorities to forbid the annual orgy once and for all.

"Reliable reports show that nearly 1,000 men and women partook of a celebration in the name of Babylon of which even King Belshazzer would have been ashamed," the manifesto asserts.

"Completely nude men and women paraded amid scenes of drunkenness unparalleled in the most famous orgies of the Roman Empire.

"The actual scenes, if printed, would result in the instant confiscation of such a book or newspaper by the police and the prosecution of the author.

"Meanwhile foreigners, of whom many hundreds were present, look upon this as an example of French morality."

The students are preparing a counter protest which, however, will not be published today as a result of their inability to get their brains in working order to prepare it.

9 MEN, BOAT AND 600 CASES OF RUM SEIZED

Rochester, N. Y., June 24 (I.N.S.)—Surprising the crew in the act of unloading a cargo of Canadian ale today near Nine Mile Post, customs officers arrested nine men, seized a thirty-foot boat and 600 cases of contraband goods.

Two other men escaped despite shots of the raiders. All of the men gave their homes as Rochester, except Joseph Thompson, Hamilton, Ont., believed to have been the skipper.

BRITAIN SEEKS TO INSURE PEACE

London, June 24 (A.P.)—Foreign Secretary Austen Chamberlain today told the House of Commons that Great Britain's obligations under the proposed western European security pact "must be definitely limited to the frontier between Germany on the one side and France and Belgium on the other."

He added that "our guarantees of that frontier cannot be invoked by a wrongdoer to shield him in his wrongdoing."

He said the abstention of the British Empire and of Great Britain in particular from European affairs never had served and never would serve the interests of peace. Great Britain's signature to the covenant of the League of Nations was incompatible with isolation.

"Our safety is not in seeking an impossible isolation," he said, "but in a wise and prudent use of our influence and power to obtain peace and prevent war from breaking out again."

FORMER CHIEF MAINE SUPREME JUSTICE DIES

Augusta, Me., June 24 (A.P.)—Leslie C. Cornish, former chief justice of the Supreme Judicial Court of Maine, died at his residence here today.

Justice Cornish has been in frail health for some time. This caused him to resign as chief justice four months ago, before the completion of his term. He had been confined to his bed the past week. While sitting up and having his breakfast, served he passed away without any warning. Mrs. Cornish died a year ago. They had no children.

2 WOMEN OF HARRIMAN FAMILY SEEK DIVORCES

Paris, June 24 (I.N.S.).—Mrs. Frederick Havemeyer and Mrs. Henry Potter Russell, New York society women and members of the Harriman family of New York, today applied to the French courts for divorces.

Mrs. Havemeyer was Lillie Harriman, daughter of Oliver Harriman, the financier, before her marriage in New York, June 21, 1906.

Mrs. Russell's maiden name was Ethel M. B. Harriman. She is the daughter of the late J. Borden Harriman.

SOCIALISTS UPHOLD PAINLEVE ON MOROCCO

Paris, June 24 (A.P.)—Premier Painleve's ministry has triumphantly survived the first test question on which it had been prophesied that the Socialist party would abandon it.

M. Painleve obtained a vote of confidence on his Moroccan policy in the Chamber of Deputies, 510 to 30. The Socialists with few exceptions voted with it.

TWINS BOTH GIFTED WITH MUSICAL SKILL

TOWN HALL TOO SMALL, CLINTON MUST BALLOT

Clinton, June 24.—Cramped quarters in the Town Hall, which was too small to hold the 3,000 voters which stormed the building to act on the proposal to put all town employes under civil service, compelled the board of selectmen to postpone the election until Monday, when the voting will begin at 1 p. m. and continue until 8 o'clock.

The proposal if adopted will affect the superintendents of streets, water, park, moth extermination and cemetery departments as well as all subordinate employes.

THUGS TAKE DIAMONDS IN BROAD DAYLIGHT

New York, June 24, (A.P.).—While Broadway bustled today with traffic, and a policeman directing a stream of cars and pedestrians within a hundred feet, two armed thugs held up the jewelry store of Marcus Feldman on Broadway between 45th and 46th streets at 10:30 o'clock and escaped with gems, rings and other valuables estimated to be worth about $200,000.

The three, young, well dressed and carrying revolvers, forced two employes of the store into a back room, trussed them u pwith picture wire and then leisurely went through the safe and showcases.

The safe had just been opened for the day, permitting the robbers to take the most valuable part of the stock.

Witnesses later said they saw two young men carrying a gray bag leave the store and disappear among pedestrians on a side street. They were well away before an alarm gong, sounded by Morris Sidney, one of the trussed up pair, brought police to the scene. Sidney, still tied, had managed to squirm to the front of the store, where he set off the alarm with his foot.

The Feldman store is between the Plaza and Astor theatres, in the heart of the Times square district.

Directly north is a music store, from which jazz music blared while the robbery was in progress, deafening the ears of Sidney and his companion, Joseph Shymel, negro porter, while they lay in the back room.

Marcus Feldman, proprietor of the store, arrived soon after the robbery and valued the loot at $200,000. He said he had only $75,000 insurance.

It was he who found the employes trussed up and released them.

VETS TO SOUND TAPS FOR SCHUMANN-HEINK

Omaha, June 24 (A.P.).—Mme. Schumann-Heink, prima donna, sang for the Disabled American Veterans of the World War and received a pledge that they would sound "taps" when she was no more.

Mme. Schumann-Heink, who is a Gold Star mother, sings often for World War veterans, and each time she receives the pledge of the bugle's requiem.

"Remember, boys—your promise—that when I go—your bugler will put me to rest—you promise?"

The right hand of each maimed hero went up in military fashion.

"As long as Schumann-Heink lives, if you really want me, I will be pleased—honored—to come back to you."

COOLIDGE TALKS TO CROWD AT SALEM; HURRIES TO RED GABLES

Salem had its "big time" when the presidential party reached that city to leave the special train and take motor cars for Swamp scott. At the left, and in the order seen, are some of the welcoming party—Mayor George S. Bates of Salem, Congressman A. P. Andrew, Mrs. John Jacob Rogers and Joseph L. Symmes.

Rankin, was unaware of the fact that the President of the United States was asleep almost in his back yard until he appeared at the station to open for the day.

The train was backed on to the West Peabody siding at 4:32 a. m., having come down from Worcester and Lowell. At 7 o'clock the Executive chief executive and the First Lady of the Land arose, and at 7:40 the big Pacific type engine, with Engineer J. H. Park at the throttle, got under way for the few remaining miles of the journey.

BAND GETS IN ITS WORK.

Meantime a huge crowd had gathered at the Boston & Maine station in Salem, many having been on hand since early in the morning.

A few minutes before the President's train was due, the blare of a band was heard, and the crowd surged forward.

It proved to be a detachment of Knights Templars, bound for their convention in Worcester, whose train left at 7:53.

The President's automobile, with its coat of arms, and with Chauffeur Francis Robinson at the wheel, was parked at the Norman street entrance to the station, together with other machines.

FIVE IN RECEPTION.

Standing on the platform in a little group surrounded by Secret Service men were Mrs. John Jacob Rogers, widow of the Congressman; Frank W. Stearns, Senator William M. Butler of Massachusetts, Mayor George J. Bates of Salem, and Congressman A. Piatt Andrew.

Others at the station were Postmaster Albert Pierce, Joseph L. Simon, chairman of the Salem Republican City Committee; James Wright, secretary of the Republican National Committee; Morgan J. McSweeney, clerk of the Salem court; John D. Tivnan, managing editor of the Salem News; Ex-Mayor Benson of Salem, and Abraham Newmark, commander of the Salem Post of the American Legion.

The station was draped with bunting, as were all the buildings on the main street of Salem, and the crowd was so dense that many active persons had climbed to the roofs to obtain a better view.

Just before 8 o'clock there was a cry: "Here they come," and as thousands of heads craned forward and Salem police worked strenuously to hold back the crowd, the special slid gently into the station.

As the train emerged from the tunnel President and Mrs. Coolidge were seen on the observation platform, but they hurried inside as the depot was reached, only to appear a moment later at the Norman street entrance.

COULDN'T DENY THE CROWD.

In compliance with the request of the President, there was no organized demonstration, but the crowd would not be denied its welcome. Cheer after cheer burst forth, to which the President and Mrs. Coolidge bowed and smiled their acknowledgments.

Both were somewhat pale and apparently fatigued from their journey and expressed themselves as being very happy to arrive.

"Good morning," said the President, waving his panama hat at the crowd. "We are very glad to be here. It is very kind of you," he added, referring to the demonstration.

Mrs. Coolidge supplemented the statement by saying they were tired, but happy to have arrived.

POSED FOR CAMERA MEN.

There was a general handshaking with the members of the reception committee, which had been augmented by the arrival of Colonel Cheney, the President's military aide, and Captain Adolphus Andrews commander of the Mayflower.

Then the President and Mrs. Coolidge smilingly posed for the hordes of camera men, movie and still, and the President remarked: "Close up, too, I suppose."

President Coolidge wore a light tan suit, with a Summery tie, and carried his panama in his hand.

In the words of an ingenuous "sub sister," he looked as though he had been "slicked up" by his valet.

As Mrs. Coolidge descended from the train she spied the official chauffeur, who has held the position since President Taft was in the White House.

"Oh, there's Francis," she cried.

Then her eye lighted on Frank Stearns, and the handshaking began.

The party was escorted to the waiting automobiles by the Secret Service men, while the police stationed at the depot strained to hold back the crowd.

With the President and Mrs. Coolidge were Louise Jonsthoel, the famous White House cook, and Secretary Ernest Saunders.

With John Prendergast, Swampscott's lone motorcycle officer, in the van, followed by a detail of Salem motorcycle officers, the procession got under way for Swampscott.

Behind the police was a machine loaded with Secret Service men, then came the President's car, trailed by that containing the reception committee, in turn followed by automobiles packed with newspapermen and photographers.

Through Lafayette street the procession passed, the President waving his hat to rows of school children drawn up on the sidewalk, while Mrs. Coolidge smiled, out Loring avenue to Swampscott, through Burrill street to Puritan road, and by way of Monument square to the driveway leading to the Stearns' estate on Little's Point.

Waiting at Red Gables were Harold D. Lincoln, chairman of the Swampscott board of selectmen; Deputy Chief Edward D. Callahan and Officer Walter F. Reeves of Lynn, who are acting chief and deputy chief of Swampscott since the rum scandal.

Drawn up at the entrance was the famous Marine guard, in command of Lieutenant Edgar Allan Poe, Jr., the men wearing side arms. As the presidential car swept by, the Marines snapped to salute and then, after the party had passed, proceeded to establish a deadline about 100 yards inside the grounds. Not even newspapermen were allowed to pass.

Mrs. Stearns appeared at the house when the party arrived, ushering them in through the side door, where, after farewells had been spoken, the reception committee left the visitors to a private breakfast with their hosts.

They will spend the remainder of today and tonight at Red Gables, moving into White Court tomorrow for the Summer.

Ralph W. Milliken, conductor of the special.

John Welcomes Parents at Red Gables

The welcome which appealed most to President and Mrs. Coolidge on their arrival at Red Gables was that extended by a boy.

He happened to be their only son, John, with whom they enjoyed a happy reunion.

"How are you, John?" the President questioned earnestly as he shook hands with the tall, sunbrowned young man.

"Great!" was the succinct reply.

Such a casual greeting was not sufficient for John's mother, however.

She folded the boy to her bosom, despite his size, and kissed him again and again while John wriggled with embarrassment. He has just completed his freshman year at Amherst, his father's Alma Mater. He will remain with his parents until he leaves for the Summer training camp at Devens.

CIGAR AND WALK START DAY FOR COOLIDGE

After breakfast President Coolidge, accompanied by a Secret Service man, strolled about the spacious grounds of Red Gables, smoking a cigar.

The sun shone brightly, tempered by a cool sea breeze, birds sang, flowers and shrubs bloomed, and the grass formed a soft carpet, the whole making a picture which was appreciated to the full by the nation's chief executive.

After about half an hour the President returned to the veranda, where he selected a comfortable rocking chair, and joined by Frank Stearns, gave himself up to restful enjoyment.

Noises from the main road, some 500 yards away, were muted by distance, becoming only a soothing hum; newspapermen and photographers were kept outside the grounds for the time being and there was nothing to disturb the President's repose.

Captain Adolphus Andrews, commander of the Mayflower, called to pay his respects and then proceeded to the marine camp at Lincoln's House Point, half a mile away, to inspect the guard.

MARINES ARE INSPECTED.

The marines, drawn up in company front, armed with rifles, made an imposing sight. Accompanied by Lieutenant Edgar Allan Poe, Jr., commanding the guard, Captain Andrews passed up and down the lines.

All the marines took part in the inspection except the guard detail of twelve men stationed around the Stearns estate, with their guardhouse in the garage of White Court.

The marine guard is supplemented by eight secret service men, under the direction of Richard Jervis, who are constantly moving about the grounds.

During the morning Mrs. Coolidge and Mrs. Stearns spent considerable time on the sun porch of Red Gables, leaving the men to talk on the veranda.

Shortly after the arrival of the party Mrs. Coolidge was presented with another bouquet, making the fourth she had received, the others being given by school children and the Swampscott selectmen.

FLOWERS, BUT NO VISITORS.

The chauffeur of Mrs. E. A. Shuman, who is spending the Summer at Marblehead Neck, drove up to Red Gables, where his machine was halted by the guard. One of the Marines then took the flowers and handed them to Mrs. Coolidge at the house.

Another visitor was a dilapidated appearing dog of uncertain ancestry, which made strenuous attempts to get into the grounds, as though anxious to strike up an acquaintance with Rob Roy, the White House dog.

The corps of White House chauffeurs, in their neat semi-military livery, were busy all day carrying maids back and forth to and from Lynn, apparently on shopping trips. They with a squad of sailors from the Mayflower appeared to be the only busy persons at Red Gables.

The sailors were sent up to unpack the baggage under the supervision of Colonel Cheney, the President's aide.

Coolidges Eager to Settle in New Summer Home

The President was much at home at Red Gables, as he frequently visited there while Governor of Massachusetts. He had just terminated a vacation stay at the cottage and gone to Vermont in the Summer of 1923 when called to the presidency by the death of Warren G. Harding.

Despite his familiarity with Red Gables, Mr. Coolidge seemed impatient to get settled at White Court. He sent word for the ship's carpenter on the Mayflower to take charge of the unpacking of furnishings brought from Washington and arrange things in their new home.

Meantime, the executive offices on the sixth floor of a Lynn business building were opened by Everett Saunders, private secretary to the President.

The staff consisted of E. W. Smith, chief operator; Erwin Geisler, personal stenographer to the President; Edward Bradshaw, telegrapher and clerk, and "Pat" McKenna, veteran doorman of the White House.

The executive office switchboard was put in operation, with four trunk lines direct to Washington, another to White Court and others to the outside world. In a short time the office force was functioning as smoothly as if at the White House.

COOLIDGE SAYS 'HOWDY, N. E.!' VIA PAPERS

By BERT FORD.

Swampscott, June 24.—At 4 o'clock today President Coolidge, who with Mrs. Coolidge and entourage arrived at Swampscott this morning, will announce to the people of the country how good it feels to be back in his beloved New England and especially in the good old Bay State.

A conference with the press representatives has been arranged for that hour at White Court. It will take the form of a reception. President and Mrs. Coolidge will hurry over from Red Gables to White Court for the affair.

SALEM IS JOYOUS.

Swampscott may be all puffed up because it is to be the Summer Capital, but Salem had the lead on its neighbor by welcoming President and Mrs. Coolidge.

President Coolidge had requested a quiet welcome, but there happened to be passing a delegation in the regalia of the Scottish Rite with a band which gave a touch of color.

After local committees had greeted President Coolidge and the "first lady in the land," they were conveyed by motor to Red Gables, the home of Mr. and Mrs. Frank W. Stearns, where breakfast was served.

HOME FOR CLERKS.

Mr. and Mrs. Coolidge will remain the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Stearns until White Court has been put into shape. As the silver service did not arrive until Tuesday on the Mayflower, that and other household accessories were installed at the eleventh hour.

There are others in the Presidential suite overjoyed to be here. The President's personal stenographer, Irwin C. Geiser, is a native of Lawrence.

The President's clerk and second stenographer, Miss Ethel E. Peck, is a native of Swampscott.

But eager and impatient as she was to return to her native heath she could not refrain from trying out her new flivver. She started in it from Washington last night. The Secret Service men say that they have to send out scouting parties if she should happen to suffer a flat tire, but all hands are hoping she will be at her typewriter Thursday morning.

INTEREST IN SLEUTHS.

Young America and grown-ups were intensely interested in the big blue touring car with the letters "U. S. S. S." where number plates ought to be. This is the official car of the Secret Service men who act as the President's bodyguard.

Children Begin Early Rush to See President

Flowers from neighbors began to deluge President and Mrs. Coolidge shortly after their arrival at Red Gables. The first blooms, tea roses from nearby gardens, were sent in by H. E. Gale of Swampscott and I. T. Mann of Magnolia.

Neighbors' children on flag-decked bicycles and tricycles pedalled their way to the vicinity of White Court during the day, hoping to get a glimpse of the nation's chief executive and the first lady of the land.

Three maids employed at the White House arrived at White Court at a. m. from the Mayflower and at once began to put the place into condition.

Shortly after an official government truck arrived loaded with luggage. Several golf bags protruded from the top of the heap.

'CAL' MUST LOOK OUT FOR LOW CEILING

President Coolidge and his wife will sleep in ordinary brass beds tonight at the Stearns home. These beds have square posts and are of the type common fifteen or twenty years ago.

It will not be the first time the President and his wife have occupied them, as they have passed portions of five vacations at Red Gables, the first time when Mr. Coolidge was Lieutenant-Governor of this State.

No doubt today's visit to Red Gables will recall sad memories to Mr. and Mrs. Coolidge, as it was there that Calvin, Jr., spent his last vacation with them two years ago, just before his death. It is likely that the President and his wife will motor from Swampscott to their son's grave in Vermont on July 7, the second anniversary of his death, to place some flowers there.

The President's room at Red Gables has an old-fashioned fireplace, in keeping with the general effect. In approaching the front of the room to look upon the ocean from a window of the gabled roof, the President must needs be careful or he will strike his head upon the angles of the ceiling which encroach upon the room's height.

The wall paper of this room is a modest cream color, black vertical lines half an inch apart, with small pink rosebuds here and there to relieve the severity of design.

A few pictures are hung in the room. The most interesting is a small photograph showing four generations of Stearns, including the seventeen-year-old twins, who are now attending a fashionable school for girls.

Boston American Men First to Greet Party

The first persons to welcome the presidential party to Massachusetts were representatives of the Boston Evening American, who discovered that the special train was parked on a siding at West Peabody.

With the exception of a police guard, Secret Service men and other officials, the fact that the train was held at West Peabody for about three hours was not known. The spot is isolated, almost surrounded by trees.

So quiet and restful were the surroundings that the President and Mrs. Coolidge did not arise until 7 o'clock. As they were to breakfast at Red Gables, they had plenty of time before the arrival of the train in Salem an hour later.

BLUE AND GRAY RULE FIRST LADY'S ATTIRE

Mrs. Coolidge, although evidently fatigued by the journey, looked fresh and cool in a blue sport dress spotted with black and white dots, and a black silk coat. She wore a light gray sport hat, with a gray feather, and under one arm carried a fancy handbag of black, trimmed with silver, which, according to newspaperwomen, must have come direct from Paris. The costume of the First Lady of the Land was completed by gray silk stockings and gray slippers.

As the President's machine entered Swampscott, a little girl attempted to hand Mrs. Coolidge a bouquet of flowers. The machine failed to stop, but a car behind picked up the bouquet and it was later presented to Mrs. Coolidge, who had also been given flowers by school children in Salem.

School children of West Peabody were disappointed over their failure to obtain a glimpse of the presidential party. When word that the special was on the siding they marshalled down to the track, but neither the President nor his wife appeared.

3 OF EVOLUTION LAWYERS WIN DEGREES

Honored by Tennessee School; Bar Hits at Long Trial; Call Army of Experts

Knoxville, Tenn., June 24 (A.P.)—An army of expert witnesses, representing various scientific and religious shades of the evolution question will be called to the front of J. T. Scopes, indicted high school teacher, it has been announced by defense counsel today.

Clarence Darrow and Bainbridge Colby were principal speakers at the graduating exercises of the John R. Neal college of law, and both dentally were presented with honorary degrees of doctor of laws.

A similar honor went to Dudley Field Malone of New York. Dr. John R. Neal, senior, dean of the law school presented the degrees, referred to Mr. Darrow as the man who framed the first juvenile court law.

Declaring that "many of our legislators will vote for anything they think will bring them votes," Mr. Darrow said this was true of some statutes, and asserted "they voted for prohibition and they still have it."

He expressed the hope that sometime we may have men sent to the Legislature to repeal laws instead of to enact more laws."

The prospect that the Scopes trial would evolve into a long drawn out affair, has led to a proposal from the Maury County delegation to the State Bar Association, saying it would support a resolution calling on Judge Raulston to hold strictly to the law and not to hear expert witnesses.

Leroy H. Hammond, spokesman, said it would be "silly" for the State to pay jurymen and court attaches to sit for weeks and listen to the orations of lawyers "that will not settle any question."

PROF. JACQUES LOEB'S DAUGHTER IS BRIDE

Paris, June 24 (A.P.)—Miss Annie L. Loeb, daughter of the late Professor Jacques Loeb of the Rockefeller Institute of New York, and Edouard E. Boeckel of Montclair, N. J., were married here today. There was a civil ceremony at the City Hall and a religious ceremony in the Rue Boissy d'Anglas. After two months of European travel the couple will make their home in Montclair.

WHALE CARRIES EXPLORER ON ITS BACK

New York, June 24 (A.P.)—Having ridden a mile on a whale's back, H. A. Snow, naturalist and explorer, has returned to prove his feat.

Also, in the name of the United States he has posted a proclamation of annexation on Herald Island, thirty square miles of barren rock. He has a photograph of Old Glory floating over the snow against a background of rocky cliffs.

While in a boat making pictures of a whale they had harpooned Snow and several companions suddenly found the boat themselves still in it, lifted out of the water, on the whale's back. Dramatically the whale dived and the boat settled into the water, but it was lifted again each time.

DRUG IN DRINK, YOUNG WIFE LOSES LIFE

Jersey Man, Accused of Killing, Tells of Using the Dangerous Drug

Hackensack, N. J., June 24 (A.P.)—Maurice Dering of Harrington Park, N. J., is accused of murder as the result of the death of Mrs. Ethel Wheeler from a drink which in years gone by has been known as a "love potion," but which has other legitimate uses. Mrs. Wheeler, wife of Herbert Wheeler, for buyer for a New York department store, died in a hospital at Englewood, N. J., Monday.

In a roadhouse at Coatesville, Saturday night, Dering dropped a powder obtained from a druggist in Mrs. Wheeler's drink, he told police. Mrs. Wheeler collapsed quickly and was driven from the roadhouse to the hospital. After he made his statement to the police Dering was beaten up by Wheeler, detectives say.

Mrs. Eleanor Dering, owner of a real estate development with which her son was associated, said she had pleaded with Mrs. Wheeler to let her boy alone. Dering is twenty-five years old.

Friends of Mrs. Wheeler said she had expressed a desire to break off the friendship and that she told an acquaintance:

"This is the last time I'm going to meet Maurice, for I'm going to break away from his influence."

Mrs. Wheeler was thirty-nine years old and had been married seven years. A daughter by a previous marriage is seventeen years old.

ORDINARY RECEIVERS WILL GET GERMAN BROADCASTS

New York, June 24 (A.P.)—American radio fans possessing even ordinary receiving sets will be able to "listen in" on German broadcasting programs within a year, according to Major-General James G. Harbord, president of the Radio Corporation of America, who returned today from Europe on the Paris. He announced completion of arrangements with German stations to broadcast their programs through the corporation's plant. General Harbord expressed as his opinion that there will be few radical changes in radio sets this Fall. The United States had made more progress in radio research than any country save Germany, he said.

RADIO TO SOUND DEFENSE DAY DOCTRINE

Dawes, Pershing and Hines Among Speakers to Be Heard From Many Stations

Washington, June 24 (AP)—Thirty major radio broadcasting stations in nineteen States have been invited by the War Department to co-operate in a nation-wide Defense Day program between 9 and 10:30 p. m., Eastern standard time, July 4.

Acceptances have been received from thirteen stations situated in Massachusetts, New York, Washington, D. C., Pennsylvania, Ohio, Missouri, Iowa, Minnesota, Nebraska, Utah and California.

The plan calls for the most extensive broadcasting attempt yet made. The program provides for opening exercises from WCAP at Washington, with Major-General Charles Saltzman, chief signal officer of the Army, as master of ceremonies, introducing Acting Secretary Dwight F. Davis of the War Department for a ten-minute talk. The next address will be made by Vice-President Dawes at Chicago, to be followed by a conversation between the Vice-President and General Pershing in Washington, after which General Pershing will speak.

W. S. Gifford, president of the American Telephone & Telegraph Company, will speak at New York, and the next twenty minutes will be devoted to a verbal report of the chief of staff of the Army, Major General John L. Hines, on the defense muster test in the Second Corps Area (New York) and a similar report from the Sixth Corps Area (Chicago). At the conclusion General Hines will announce the results of the test in all nine corps areas.

Stations which have accepted the invitation include WCTS, Worcester; WEAF, New York; WCAE, Pittsburgh; WSAI, Cincinnati; KSD, St. Louis; WDAF, Kansas City; WOC, Davenport, Ia.; WCCO, Minneapolis and St. Paul; WOAW, Omaha; KSL, Salt Lake City; KPO, San Francisco, and KFI, Los Angeles.

Ten Years Unless Woman Tells Where Boy Is

New York, June 24 (A.P.)—Convicted of kidnaping three-year-old Raimonde Von Maluski, Mrs. Mary Jones has until Friday to disclose what she did with the boy or receive the maximum punishment—imprisonment for 10 to 50 years.

The boy vanished three months ago and is presumed to be dead. Judge Collins warned Mrs. Jones that if she did not reveal what became of the boy he would give her "the limit."

The state contended the lad was kidnaped for revenge against the Maluskis who took into their home the husband from whom Mrs. Jones is separated. Harold Jones is assistant to Raimonde Von Maluski, Sr., superintendent of an apartment house.

WEST END FOLK PROTEST NEW BALL PARK

Jewish Group and Hospital Fight Charles Playground at Hearing Today

A hearing on the protest of the West End Jewish Community of Federated Jewish Charities over the proposed construction of a ball park and recreation field between Chamberlain and Leverett streets along the Charles River basin, is scheduled at the office of the Boston park commissioner today.

The Jewish organization represents a membership of 2,500 persons. The Massachusetts General Hospital officers and Mrs. Henry Hornblower also have lodged protests against the proposal.

For years the shady, grassy slopes of this narrow strip of greensward between Charles street and the river has been a cool rendezvous, night and day in the Summertime, for hundreds of men, women and children from the stuffy tenements

MISS M'SWINEY WON'T 'HUNGER STRIKE' HERE

In United States It Would Be Immoral, She Declares in New York

New York, June 24 (A.P.)—Miss Mary MacSwiney, returning to New York from a lecture tour, today denied statements that were credited to her. She was particularly insistent that she had not threatened a hunger strike if arrested in this country and that she did not say that she had come into the county without a passport.

"I have been quoted," said Miss MacSwiney," as saying that I had threatened a hunger strike if I should be arrested by the United States authorities on suspicion of having entered this country illegally. Such a proceeding on my part would not only be unjustifiable but immoral. A hunger strike is a very serious matter, and not to be lightly or rashly undertaken.

"I shall always hunger-strike against the British claim to authority in Ireland, if arrested by them or any of their servants. The position is quite otherwise here. The United States government is the lawful government of this country and while I am a visitor here I am bound to obey their laws and regulations. If they suspect me, even without foundation, of infringing their laws or regulations, they are quite justified in proceeding against me. If they judge they have sufficient reason.

"I believe this report of an intention to hunger-strike is just British propaganda. As I have already said, I shall neither hunger-strike nor go 'on the run.' If your authorities want me they will have no difficulty in finding me."

Smartdom Journeys Out to No. Andover for Wedding

Staff Photograph.

Mrs. Francis P. Sears, handsome young matron of the Town's Elect, rides as cleverly as she plays tennis, and adorns opera box or ballroom with decided chic. The Sears town house is in Mt. Vernon street, No. 83.

Betty Alden

JUNE'S succession of ultra smart weddings of much interest to Boston's Belgravia is reaching a brilliant finish. Miss Gertrude Sutton Russell's marriage to Benjamin Franklin Ree-Bassett, one of the last and most important, was the moneys which drew Smartdom out to North Andover for ceremonial and reception.

LIKE MANY of its predecessors, the Vincent Club-Junior League-Chilton Club atmosphere prevailed as to the feminine half of the wedding party. As to the masculine portion thereof, it was Harvardese almost to a man. Mr. Rice-Bassett graduating with honors this year, held weighty collegiate honors.

SECOND MARSHAL for Class Day, crew captain in freshman year, president of the student council, president of the sophomore class are on the role. Club memberships are the Porcellian, Hasty Pudding, Phoenix and Stylus.

CHESTER BASSETT, JR., the bridegroom's brother (New Yorkers both, by the way), was best man, and for ushers the list reads: Richard S. Russell, Jr., and William A. Russell (the bride's brothers), Loring Whitman, Robert H. Hallowell, George W. Burgess, James J. Magee and Alfred Codman, Jr., of the Boston atmosphere.

HENRY M. BOHLEN of Philadelphia, Richard D. Tucker and James B. Taller, Jr., of New York, and Philip H. Theopold of these names occur in wedding stories), completed a well set up squad for duties at St. Paul's Church for the bridal and later at the reception.

TWO MINISTERS, the Rev. William H. Dewart of the Old North Church, Boston, and the Rev. R. H. Kendrick of the Andover Parish, read the marriage lines before the flower-decked altar of St. Paul's Church, and Richard S. Russell, father of the bride, gave her in marriage.

* * *

SHE WAS A lovely and dark-eyed bride in rich robes of rare old brocaded Irish Point over tulle. There was a train of the Court variety formed of lace, and veil of tulle caught with orange blossoms. The cluster bouquet was of valley lilies and orchids.

* * *

HER ATTENDANTS were summery greens and yellows. Miss Frances Weld as honor maid, in green, and Miss Hannah Hallowell, Miss Margery Richardson and Miss Helen Scott (contemporaries of the bride in the Winter of 1922-23) wore green.

* * *

MISS FRANCES H. DEWART, out a year later, with Miss Elinor Sutton and Miss Hildegarde Kuhnhardt, two charming North Andover girls, completed the attending sextet. Their frocks carried graceful capes in chiffon and their transparent hats, ribbon trimmed, added to the summery gossamer effect.

* * *

AFTER THE CHURCH ceremonial guests went on to "Oakland," the Richard S. Russell's Summer home in Great Pond Road, North Andover. Their town house in Commonwealth avenue, No. 119.

MR. AND MRS. RICE-BASSETT are to live in Flushing, over in Long Island, setting up their household goods and welcoming their hosts of friends after July the 15th.

BETTER CITIZEN CAMPAIGN IS PLANNED

Amos Auxiliary of B'nai B'rith Outlines Work at Brookline Meeting

Plans for an extensive campaign of education to spread the gospel of "Better Citizenship" were made at a meeting of the Amos Auxiliary of B'nai B'rith at a meeting held in Beacon Hall, Brookline.

Mrs. Sol Goldberg of Dorchester, newly elected president of the organization, presided. Mrs. Jennie Lehman Barron, chairman of the legislative committee of the Boston League of Women Voters, addressed the body on "Women and Their Civic Responsibility." The details of the campaign are in the hands of Mrs. Rose Harris Cooper, chairman of the committee on Americanization and Social Service. Mrs. David Peskin of Roxbury and Mrs. Arthur Wilson of Brighton are assisting her.

Amos Lodge, B'nai B'rith of which George Gordon is president, will cooperate with the women of the auxiliary in this educational campaign. The lodge committee include Morris Katzeff, chairman; Elihu D. Stone, Robert Silverman, Alexander Brin, Isidore Fox, Max Ulin and Leo J. Lyons.

Rabbi P. Hurwitz of the West End will return to this city from a visit to Palestine next Saturday. A delegation headed by members of the Hebrew Immigrant Aid Society will meet him at Cunard Dock, East Boston, and escort him to his home on Poplar street, West End.

Rabbi Hurwitz, among the foremost orthodox Hebrew scholars in the country, spent several months in the Holy Land studying conditions and acquiring further knowledge of the Talmud Torah by viewing the actual spots mentioned in the Bible of Jerusalem.

Nantasket and Pemberton are slowly filling up with the Jewish families of Roxbury and Dorchester and activities, social and otherwise are centering on the beaches with as much precedure as they did in the city.

The Council of Jewish Women have taken headquarters on the North Shore where they not only afford comfort and relief from the heat of the city for themselves but to the girls of the factory and workshops as well. These girls upon making application at the council offices in the Province Building will be able to take such advantage.

The girls can spend the day or the week-ends, bring their bathing suits, cook their own meals and honor Nature in true fashion.

$2,000,000 TAX REFUND SUIT FILED HERE

Executor for P. C. Brooks, a Medford Millionaire, Makes U. S. Collector Defendant

A suit for a $2,000,000 Federal tax refund was filed in Federal Court today by Arthur D. Hill on behalf of the estate of the late Peter C. Brooks, Medford millionaire.

Malcolm E. Nichols, collector of internal revenue at Boston, is made the defendant. Attorney Hill is executor of the estate.

In his bill the plaintiff alleges that in 1905 Mr. Brooks created a trust fund, which he built up to $4,617,000 in 1907.

In January, 1920, Mr. Brooks died and Attorney Hill paid an estate tax on $5,213,605, which was the amount in the fund at the time. Later, he states, Collector Nichols assessed an additional tax of $1,080,640, which was paid, with interest, bringing it to $1,166,617.

He paid the tax under protest and is now suing to recover the whole sum with interest.

WORRY IS TO WASTE YOUR STRENGTH

By DR. FRANK CRANE

WORRY is waste of effort.

You are going to need all the strength you have to fight the real battles of life, and the strength you put forth in worry is that much waste. It is steam gone to waste and out into thin air when it might have been employed in the engine.

It is well to ask ourselves the value or need of any thought. If it can do us no good, why should we entertain it?

We cannot afford to indulge in worry. It is an extravagant habit.

It is said that nine-tenths of the things we worry about do not happen.

Grenville Kleiser says that worries are especially of two kinds: of things you cannot help and of things you can help. If you can help them, why not do it, and if you cannot help them, why worry?

Worry is not so wicked in itself as it is an unnecessary waste of energy.

If we would engage all our faculties in doing something that should have good results, we would have no time left to worry.

Kleiser gives this recipe for curing worry:

He tells us when we think a feeling of depression is coming over us to take a quick bath, stretch out on the bed and relax the entire body. Take deep abdominal breaths, raise first one arm and then the other, and repeat the exercise with each leg. After we have thoroughly relaxed the body, we should call to mind some happy incident and dwell upon it.

The more we substitute thoughts about happy and cheerful things for those that are depressing, the more worry will find no room in us and we shall acquire a cheerful disposition.

Worry is really care that comes in to fill up a vacuum. Its cause is the lack of energy in other directions. Therefore the more creative energy we exercise and purposeful thoughts we think, the less room will worry have to invade us.

"10-Cent Store King" Vanishes as Wife Sues

"How do you do, Bill," said Sally, exactly as if she had been expecting her former sweetheart. "Won't you come in?"

Posed for the Boston Evening American by Louise Groody and Wellington Cross, of the "No, No, Nanette" Company. Photo by Charles Stafer

SALLY MEREDITH, niece of M. FREDERIC LASELLE, war gas inventor, learns from her uncle the secret of opening the red lacquer case containing the gas formula. Spies of European governments are seeking to steal the secret of the gas. The marked hand appears at the window as Sally is told the secret. Lasalle hides the case in Sally's house and disappears, thereby beginning all of Sally's troubles. Sally and her uncle have discussed MAJOR WILLIAM ARMITAGE, engaged to the girl seven years earlier. They disputed over Sally's suffrage ideas. That ended their engagement.

VERY slowly Sally went across to the window and shut it. She stood with her hand on the hasp for a moment, looking out. It was the middle window which was open last night, and the spy must have stood just there on the edge of the gravel path. A horrid little shiver went all over her. If anything had happened to Fritzi!

With a jerk she drew the curtains, and ran over to the glass-fronted bookshelf which flanked the fireplace. Kneeling on the brick, she flung the door wide, and dragged both Tillotson's sober volumes from their place on the lowest shelf. There was nothing behind them.

Sally began to feel very cold. She pulled out Jeremy Taylor and Izaak Walton, and there was nothing behind either, and on the next shelf nothing; and on the one above nothing either.

She went over to the crumpled ball, which was Fritzi's letter, and picked it up. The envelope was still on the little table. She took it and tured it over. She had not broken the seals, but had opened it by tearing the top.

She went now to the window, drew back the curtain, and looked long and steadily at Fritzi's three blobs of violet wax. The edges were sharper than they should have been.

Half turning, her eyes went quickly to the little writing table. A small paper knife, dagger-shaped and made of metal, lay on the blotting pad. She picked it up, brought it to the light, and looked closely at it. A little smear of violet wax dimmed the blade. Someone had been here, then, after Fritzi had written his letter and gone away, after she herself had gone to sleep. Someone had been here in this room, and had found the letter and opened it. Quite easy, of course, with a metal paper knife, especially if you heated it.

What a perfectly horrid thing to have happened. The hand, large, pale, and darkly scarred, rose up in Sally's memory. With a rush, the thing that she had been keeping at bay became a clamorous fact, impossible to resist. Fritzi's secret was stolen; the lacquer case was gone!

CHAPTER IV

Major Armitage walked from the nearest station, Lenton Chark, of course, hadn't one.

Bill Armitage was not, however, thinking of Sally. He had, in fact, not the slightest reason to connect Sally with Chark. He was merely going to meet M. Lasalle who refused point-blank to come to London.

His path of duty ended at a latched gate. On the left of the front door there was a myrtle, and on the right a fuchsia stiffly trained against the whitewashed cottage wall. The front door was open.

Bill lifted the latch of the gate, walked up the path as far as the doorstep, and there remained rooted to the ground. He could see the recessed hearth. Before it lay a black woolly mat, and in the middle of the black woolly mat a girl was sitting. Her head was turned away, and she appeared to be staring into the fire.

The girl wore a jumper and skirt of grey wool, and her bobbed hair was the exact color of Sally Meredith's hair, that rather bright chestnut which is not so very common.

He stood looking down at the top of her head and wondering why on earth she did not turn round, since it was quite possible that she should not have heard his footsteps.

Sally did not turn because she had been trying not to cry, and she did not wish either the postman or someone from the village to see that her eyes were full of tears. She stared hard into the fire and winked vigorously. She also hoped that whoever it was would go away. And then she heard Bill Armitage's voice saying:

"I beg your pardon."

Sally was not conscious of jumping up. But in the same moment that she recognized Bill's voice she found herself on her feet, facing him and feeling exactly as if, somehow

WIFE'S KISS OF OTHER IS O. K'D.

Court Rules Cocktails and Caress of Rival No Ground for Divorce

New York, June 24 (A.P.)—Notwithstanding kissing and cocktail parties, young women are just as pure nowadays as they were years ago, in the opinion of John W. Ford, a justice of the State Supreme Court and a backer of the Clean Books League, which has been active in seeking legislation for suppression of salacious literature.

He expressed his views in court in ruling that testimony of a wife's breakfasts in negligee with another man and occasional kisses and cocktail parties were not by themselves sufficient evidence of infidelity.

The dictum was given in the trial of the suit of Thomas H. Symington, wealthy railroad equipment manufacturer, for a divorce.

HIS DAUGHTER DRINKS.

Justice Ford said that many of the things women did nowadays were misconstrued.

"Why even my daughter tells me of cocktail parties," he added. Pointing out a chic young woman, he observed:

"There she is. She'll tell you if you ask her."

His daughter is Mrs. Esther Ford Walt. Spectators in the crowded courtroom gazed in amazement.

"Kissing!" exclaimed Justice Ford. "Kissing—I was going to say promiscuous kissing—is not frowned upon these days. Yes, kissing even with another man's wife is no divorce evidence.

"Years ago if young women were seen in the places doing the things they are today they would have been ostracized. But that is not true now.

TREND OF TIMES.

"In these days a woman's course of conduct alone is not sufficient evidence for divorce. We old fellows must take into account that customs have changed. I'll admit I'm bewildered, but women today are just as pure and straight as they were years ago."

Talbot W. Chambers, coal dealer and one of two co-respondents named by Symington, was arraigned as the result of his testimony concerning Mrs. Symington. He pleaded not guilty.

Counsel for the wife gave notice that he intended to file perjury charges against Symington.

VETERAN, 100 YEARS OLD, STRUCK BY AUTOMOBILE

Matta Green, 100 years old, who says he is a veteran of nine wars and who came from New York to Boston to take part in the Bunker Hill Day celebration, was struck by an automobile at Union and Hanover streets while taking leave of his new "pals" at the house of Ladder 1.

The veteran was rescued from the pavement by Traffic Officer Sullivan and was sent to the Relief Hospital in a passing automobile, receiving treatment for bruises.

Green started fighting under the Stars and Stripes back in 1846.

LAWRENCE'S YACHT "MISSING" 41 DAYS

The 65-foot schooner yacht Advance, owned by John S. Lawrence, vice-commodore of the Eastern Yacht Club, has not been reported since she left Oslo, Norway, 41 days ago. Head winds are believed to have been responsible for her slow progress. As she left in the hands of a capable Norwegian crew, with seven weeks' provisions aboard, no fears are entertained for her safety.

The Advance was built in Norway and is to be fitted with racing rig at Lawley's, Neponset.

BOSTON TEMPLARS IN WORCESTER PARADE

Thousands saw Boston Commandery and other Knights Templars of [illegible] and vicinity in their march through downtown streets today to South Station, where they entrained for Worcester to join in the parade of 10,000 at the centennial celebration of Worcester County Commandery. At top is Miss Janet Watkins, daughter of the commander of Joseph Warren Commandery.

Thousands of Bostonians stood on downtown streets today and watched local commanderies of the Knights Templars march by on their way to South Station, en route for the 100th anniversary celebration of Worcester County Commandery No. 5.

Snappy music from several bands lightened the footsteps of the marching men. Traffic was held up several minutes on many leading streets while the Knights filed by. They went to Worcester in special trains and were accompanied by women members of their families.

With a background of eight centuries existence lending solemnity, 10,000 Knights from all parts of Massachusetts and Rhode Island took part in the parade at Worcester as feature event of the two-day celebration by Worcester Commandery.

HEADED BY ALEPPO BAND.

At the head of the procession was the world-famous Aleppo Temple Band from Boston, numbering 150 pieces, and in the line of march were forty other bands, totalling 3,000 musicians.

On the reviewing stand at Court Hill were Governor Fuller, Lieutenant-Governor Allen, Mayor O'Hara and a host of other dignitaries as the sir knights paraded by in full dress uniform, topped by waving plumes and set off by glittering, clanking sabres.

An outing at Worcester fair grounds followed the parade. Women who accompanied the knights to Worcester were banqueted at Hotel Bancroft.

In command of the long parade was Chief Marshal Frederick I. Dana of Providence, past grand commander of the Commandery of Massachusetts, and as chief aide was Eminent Sir Adelbert E. Place of Providence.

Today's spectacle, which drew Sir Knights from Massachusetts and Rhode Island in such a huge number, is the biggest event in the history of Worcester Knights, commemorating as it does the founding of the Worcester County commandery on June 24, 1825.

The Knights Templars came into existence in the 12th century and the gallants fought through seven crusades to aid persecuted Christians and wrest Jerusalem from infidels. During the French Inquisition their leaders were martyrs at the stake.

English High School Tops List With 657 Boys Receiving Diplomas

"No more teacher, no more school, No more sitting on a hardwood stool."

The well known old school days couplet is being sung from one end of Boston to the other as thousands of public school children are freed for the Summer vacation.

Nearly 11,000 children are being graduated from Boston schools this week, according to figures issued by the Board of Education. Approximately 4,000 of these are being graduated from high schools and the balance from grammar schools.

RECORD NUMBER.

Graduation exercises will be conducted tonight in the Girls' High School and tomorrow the Horace Mann and Henry L. Pierce Schools will close their year's work. The rest of the Boston schools will have graduations on Friday.

A record number of graduates is recorded in several of the high schools. English High tops the list with a graduating class of 657 boys. The Girls' High School senior class totals 320. Other schools include the High School of Commerce, 277; High School of Practical Arts, 207; Girls' Latin School, 132, and East Boston High School, 200.

MALDEN SCHOLARSHIPS.

Scholarships will be awarded tonight at Malden High School during the commencement exercises.

Isaac Berman has been awarded the newsboy scholarship; the alumni scholarship goes to Lucila Dudley and William J. Brooks. John Brew has been awarded the Hathaway scholarship and the history medal will be given to Evelyn Gillis.

Berman will go to Harvard, Miss Dudley to Simmons and Brooks and Brew to Dartmouth, according to Headmaster Thornton Jenkins.

Bay State Nurse Wins Highest Greek Honor

The Cross of St. Xavier, highest civilian decoration of the nation, has been awarded by the Greek government to Miss Jennie M. Ryan of Northampton, chief nurse at the Near East Relief Orphanage School at Syra, Greece, her friends in Boston learned today.

To Miss Ryan is given credit for saving the lives of thousands of women and children—Christians who were ordered out of Turkey two years ago.

In the number of refugees thrown directly in the care of the Northampton nurse were included 2,500 children.

SHEPHERD PREY OF CONSCIENCE, JURY IS TOLD

Chicago, June 24 (A.P.)—Indirect confessions he attributed to the defendant were the burden of the jury address today of George E. Gorman, first assistant State's Attorney, first speaker in the Shepherd murder trial.

In opening late yesterday Gorman demanded the death penalty for William D. Shepherd for the "coldly calculated, brutal murder" of Billy McClintock, his millionaire foster son, by administering typhoid germs.

Shepherd's statements to various persons that Billy's own diagnosis of his illness as typhoid prior to a diagnosis by physicians were called the voice of a "guilty conscience" and an "alibi for himself" by Gorman.

"So he begins to build up an alibi for himself, shielding himself," Gorman roared. "It was a guilty conscience talking."

Shepherd's conversation with Miss Isabelle Pope, Billy's fiancee, about Billy's late hours and its effect upon the youth's physical condition "was the voice of a guilty conscience," declared the Assistant State's Attorney.

"Fairman came to realize that the game was not worth the $100,000 promised," Gorman said concerning the State's chief witness and confessed accomplice of Shepherd. "It was his guilty conscience which prompted him to change his denials to an admission of the facts—that he had helped Shepherd. And Fairman tells you he did give Shepherd those germs.

"Fairman said he got the germs from the city health department, gave them to Shepherd and taught him how to kill Billy McClintock with them, and he did it," shouted Gorman.

WET AND DRY ISSUE IN N. J. GOVERNOR FIGHT

Trenton, N. J., June 24 (A.P.)—Tentative platforms adopted by committees of the Republican and Democratic State conventions here indicate a fight on the wet and dry issue in the campaign for Governor next Fall. A draft of the Democratic platform denounces the anti-saloon and calls for repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment and the State prohibition enforcement act and modification of the Volstead Act. The Republican draft calls for enforcement of all laws including the State Prohibition Act.

Kresge Forbade His Assistants to Follow; His Wife Also in Seclusion

New York, June 24 (Universal Service).—Publication of charges that Sebastian S. Kresge had repudiated a promise to give his wife $7,000,000 worth of stock in his business was followed today by the disappearance of the millionaire owner of the five-and-ten-cent store chain.

At Kresge's offices it was said he had left, naming no destination and advising his employes that nothing could develop which he was interested in.

Neither would L. D. Baldwin, Kresge's counsel, say where his client had gone. Baldwin was silent on all aspects of the case except to say that no answer to the wife's suit had yet been prepared.

The suing wife, Mrs. Doris Mercer Kresge, also holds herself away from the public. Since her assertion that her husband gave her a box of candy and a poodle dog last Christmas in lieu of the allegedly promised $7,000,000, the young wife has referred all questions to her attorney, Joseph S. Klein.

The suit grows out of Kresge's pre-nuptial pledge, according to the wife, to give her 20,000 shares of Kresge stock, later persuading her to accept 17,500 shares. All she has received of this, she says, is $40,000 sent to her following the couple's estrangement last May.

Mrs. Kresge will follow her present suit with one for separation, her attorney says.

PUBLIC HEARING FOR DISMISSED OFFICER

Former Patrolman John J. Cummings, dismissed as a policeman of the Fields Corner station in Dorchester, several days ago, will be granted a public hearing, Police Commissioner Wilson announced today.

The discharged officer was found guilty by a trial board of conduct unbecoming an officer. He was charged with absenting himself from duty and then reporting under the influence of liquor. The trial board recommended dismissal and the officer was dropped, later to ask for a public hearing.

COBB STILL WONDER PLAYER AFTER 18 YEARS

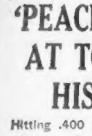
'PEACH' IS AT TOP OF HIS GAME

Hitting .400 and Fielding in Brilliant Form; Will Make Good as a Manager

By NICK FLATLEY

Tyrus Raymond Cobb, manager of the Detroit Tigers, is playing better baseball this season than he was fifteen years ago, when his name was on every kid's lips as the greatest ball tosser in the world.

Eighteen seasons of brilliance have not taken the fire out of the Cobb spirit, nor the kick out of the Cobb muscles.



Nick Flatley

The old boy can still run like a frightened deer, hit like a pile driver, think like Pat Bera Knows no champion and keep it all up indefinitely. He's the greatest wonder of time on the diamond — all because he likes the game better than anything else.

Cobb knows he's good. He isn't conceited or too arrogant. But he has the stuff and realizes it just as well as the next one. He has the heart of a fighter. He like to win, enjoys victory more than any athlete who has flashed on the sport screen since the days of John L. Sullivan.

Ty was a kid when he was crowned king of baseball. He was cocky and scrappy, the finished product of a tough school. Tyrus came up when the young fellow had to fight his way through. The rules were free for all. He learned by hard and painful experience to go after what he wanted, to ask for nothing. Consequently he acquired the habit of giving nothing.

He's as fine an example of the value of concentration and earnestness as the world offers. Other players have had more speed, his physical power, his keen batting eye. But the others haven't owned his determination, his ability to keep in the main track—baseball.

* * *

COBB, in his day, was a rowdy. That was a rowdy day, so to speak. Cobb, in these effete times, has quieted down somewhat. He resorts to arguments rather than blows. He fights for what he thinks is coming, though. Managing and playing at the same time, he wastes more baseball minutes than any other player.

When he has an argument he comes in from the outfield and offers it. He always has a good argument, so the umpires can't wave him back, nor give him the air until he's had his say. Then he joins 'em with the umps—it isn't done—but he goes right through to the merchandise. Just like Ty. He's enough of a psychologist to know that he can get an unconscious edge now and then from an arbitrator who doesn't feel representative.

TY is one of a passing school of ball players. The boys today are business men. They are out to collect while the collecting is good. They save themselves, and their money. They don't take wild chances; they don't play when they have a chance to loaf. The birds of the old regime went along for weeks at a time on one leg. The young business men are very careful of their muscles.

Still, the Cobb system is the best. Ty proves that. Over 18 years of the most intensive kind of baseball, Ty is still as good as they can be made. He isn't quite as fast as he used to be—from the plate to first base. His venerable muscles can't get the quick jump of youth. Once he's under way, though, he's a shadow. He gets as many extra bases on fumbled hits as he did when he was a tarin' youngster.

He is better today as an outfielder than he was years ago. He knows the hitting habits of every player in the league as far as it is humanly possible to know them. He can play for the swatters as well as speaker and bring his speed to help along.

* * *

THE Detroit manager is baseball's greatest student. He reads the complete account of every American League game every day. He has one of those memories that never go wrong. He remembers averages, pitchers' records and habits, every last little detail. And he brings it all to bear on his own game. The only chap who approached him even in this particular line was Johnny Evers.

Tyrus Raymond is the greatest ball player of 'em all because he spent a flock of real brains along to aid natural ability. His physical prowess would have kept him on the top for a long, long time. He didn't have to bother with the dope. But he was smart enough to see that it would help. And look at him today—hitting for .400, stealing bases, fielding like the best of the kids, having a fighting, exciting, nerve-stretching good time every afternoon in the ball yard.

* * *

COBB hasn't saved himself through all the years. He plays exhibition games and hustles harder in practice than any of his players. He had the stuff and he wanted to use it while it was good. He kept himself in such perfect trim for baseball, mentally and physically that it looks as if he never would wear out. On his playing today he'd be worth a few hundred thousand in the open market. He could still chase any of the kid stars off any ball club.

LUCK IS STILL EVADING RED SOX

Philadelphia, June 24.—The Red Sox were nosed out by the Athletics in the ninth inning at Shibe Park. Trailing 2 to 0, the Macks pushed over three runs off old Jack Quinn and won the game.

For eight innings the game was a brilliant pitching duel between the veteran Quinn and Slim Harris. Bill Wambsganss of the Sox the edge in the seventh when he drove a home run into the left field bleachers. Harris was replaced by Rommel in the eighth and two doubles gave the Sox another run.

Three errors by Joe Lucey, a pitcher who played short, helped the A's to victory during the ninth. Lucey made a wild throw on Simmons and Welch singled. Lucey then speared Cochrane's pop, but threw to first, trying to double Welch, and Simmons scored. Poole got hit by a pitched ball and with two out Bill Bagwell, former Boston Brave, acting as pinch hitter, doubled to left and won the game.

COOLIDGE STANDAIDED BOXING IN ILLINOIS

The approval of President Coolidge and of Governor Fuller of Massachusetts to the plan whereby boxing matches are supervised by the State authorities had much to do with the passage by the Illinois Legislature recently of a State boxing law, according to Senator R. J. Barr of Springfield, who recently was a visitor in Massachusetts.

Senator Barr came to the Bay State to observe the workings of the Massachusetts boxing code. While here he was informed that the law was put through at the time Calvin Coolidge was Governor and met with his approval. He was also told by Governor Fuller that the law is working out well here. When the Illinois Senator returned home the bill designed to place boxing under State supervision in Illinois was before the Legislature for consideration, and, according to Mr. Barr, the view of the Massachusetts officials had much to do with its successful passage.

In a letter written to Eugene Bickley, a member of the Massachusetts Boxing Commission, Mr. Barr says:

"I feel quite sure that my visit with you and your associates last week, as well as my conference with Governor Fuller, had much to do with the passing of the bill. I told the members of the Illinois Senate the experience of the operation of your law as outlined by you. I am certainly very grateful for the assistance you gave me and take this means of thanking you for it."

GRIMM SUSPENDED AND IS FINED $100

New York, June 24.—Charley Grimm, first baseman of the Chicago Cubs, is suspended for five days and fined $100 for his altercation with Umpire Wilson yesterday, it was announced by John A. Heydler, National League head.

BRAVES HOPE TO EMERGE FROM CELLAR

By NICK FLATLEY.

The home atmosphere had its natural effect on the Braves. They went down into the cellar, two whole games deeper, and gave themselves a tough assignment for the remainder of this home stand. They now have to win four straight to get out before the Phils leave town.

Ineffective pitching cost the Bannerites their opening double-header. There was some sloppy fielding, but the story was written in the box. Joe Barnes was bombarded off the peak in the opening explosion, and both Graham and Ryan were shaky in the finale.

The Braves had good chances to upset both pastimes, but the blow wasn't present in the pinch. The afternoon was notable mostly for the appearance of Kibbie, the new Braves second baser, and the unexpected introduction of Bill Vargus, southpaw pitcher.

The tiny chap from Texas is a mighty good fielder, fast and scrappy, with good hands and an arm. But he hasn't gauged the big time pitching with his bat. He fanned several times, going after outside curves when he was in the hole. He keeps trying, though, which is a lot in his favor.

Young Mister Vargus, who has been working out with the Tribe was on the road, pitching four excellent innings. He acted like an old stager, keeping the ball on the corners, all the time. The Phils didn't get a bit off him. He was so accustomed that he doffed his kelly nonchalantly each time he walked in to the bench. With that sort of a start, he should make good.

Wigwam Sidelights

BILL VARGUS, late of Boston College, had a very happy debut. His southpawed four hitless rounds, after socking the first man to face him. He had a lot of control for a left handed novice.

* * *

DIDN'T take Frank Hogan of Somerville long to get his letter. He was stuck in to pinch hit with two on, against one of the best pitchers in the business. That's getting experience intensively.

* * *

THE Braves looked very keen and smooth in the field. Marriott and Bonny are real fast on the right side of the diamond.

* * *

BENNY MYERS, the foghorn coach, has a cold or something. He can't be heard now farther than Somerville.

Pat McCarthy Is After Bout With Maloney

Pat McCarthy, Roxbury heavyweight, who recently conquered Hambone Kelley, is now directing his big guns on Jim Maloney.

McCarthy showed his true form in polishing off Hambone," said Jim MacDonald, McCarthy's pilot. "I now wish to have Pat direct his boy over Jerry or Maloney.

"I think Maloney would be easy for McCarthy. Jim is wide open for a left hook to the jaw as Sharkey and Tiger Flowers found out. He also has a sweet right-hand smash.

"McCarthy is also ready to tackle Tiger Flowers. I figure the Roxbury Adonis would stop the Tiger."

Zionist Winner of $25,000 Irish Derby

Curragh, Ireland, June 24 (A.P.).—The Aga Khan's Zionist won the Irish Derby for $25,000, run here today. Mrs. W. Raphael's Warminster was second and R. L. Slocock's Brighter London was third. Eight ran.

ON THE FIRE

THE Boston Evening American's selection of an All-Interscholastic Baseball Team will be printed on the sport pages on Saturday.

Fred C. Lane, this newspaper's expert on schoolboy sports, has chosen the team, as in several years past. His story, with the accompanying illustration, will set the school fans talking.

RUTH OUTLASTS OLD RED SOX RIVALS

New York, June 24.—In spite of his rather carefree mode of living, it is beginning to appear as though Babe Ruth will outlast the few survivors of the 1915-16 Boston Red Sox now remaining in the major leagues. Ruth faces at least five years of further service on the big time, provided he takes even nominal care of the excellent body with which heredity and circumstance endowed him.

It is extremely doubtful if the rest of the old Red Sox in the major leagues at present—Tris Speaker, Harry Hooper, Everett Scott, Carl Mays and Dutch Leonard—will be actively identified with big league baseball in 1930. Most of them are near the end of their tether now.

Speaker is hitting with his old fervor and can race back to get them with the next; but Tris is nearly forty and the gray of his temples is not altogether premature. There have been telltale signs for several years of Speaker's retrogression as a ball player.

Hooper sat on the bench when the White Sox opened the 1925 season, but managed to work his way back into the lineup and, at the moment, is doing well. He, however, escaped from Boston a few years ago only because the Red Sox thought he was passe. Therefore, the end cannot be far away.

Scott's impending withdrawal was forecast early this season when Miller Huggins was forced to bench him. Scott is one of the youngest of the ex-champions in point of service, but didn't wear as well as some of the others, probably because of a record of nearly nine years of consecutive play.

Another fairly youthful member of the old outfit is Carl Mays, who, like Scott, is beginning to run down.

U. S. Polo Team Beat British Again

London, June 24 (A.P.).—The United States Army polo team won the second match against the British Army team at Hurlingham Club today, six goals to four, thereby retaining the International military championship won at Meadowbrook last year.

America won the first of the three-game series last Saturday, eight goals to four. The final match will be played at Hurlingham on Saturday.

Throughout the first chukker the American officers displayed greatly superior horsemanship and stick work. They were constantly on the attack.

In the third chukker the British tied the score at two all, but Captain Peter P. Rodes soon added another for America. W. S. McCreery again used the score during the third period.

Major Beard fell off his pony during the fourth period. Captain Gerhardi's score put the visitors into a two-point lead in the fifth period. Shortly afterward a collision occurred on the field between W. S. McCreery and Captain J. P. Dening of the British team, the latter's pony falling on him. Dening thought he was not injured and was ready to resume play, but it developed that he suffered a slight concussion. Major Vivian N. Lockett replaced him.

200 GOLFERS IN JAQUES CUP TOURNEY

By BILL GRIMES

As there are in the neighborhood of 500 golfers in the State with a handicap of 10 or better, it is safe to say that there will be more than 100 pairs tee off for the qualifying round at The Country Club tomorrow, which is the opening day of the Jaques Cup tournament.

Bill Grimes

The honor of winning the Jaques Cup is almost as big as that of the State championship. Herbert Jaques was as much responsible for the wonderful success of golf in the United States as anyone ever connected or interested in the game. For years he held the highest offices in both the United States Golf Association and the Massachusetts Golf Association. The Jaques Cup is to perpetuate the memory of the greatest sportsman ever produced in this section.

Due to the large number of entries, the competition for the Jaques Cup will be exceptionally keen this year. In the past the contenders for the title played singles but this year they are paired up and it will be a best ball tournament.

Francis Ouimet and Rodney Brown are the favorites. Francis has been displaying the finest brand of golf than he has shown for years.

Plans Comeback

Los Angeles, June 24 (A.P.).—Miss Mary K. Browne, former national tennis champion and runner-up last year for the national women's golf championship, was on her way East today. She has held aside her golf clubs in favor of the racquet, with which she hopes to regain the net title she held nearly ten years ago.

It was learned that Miss Browne intends to participate in all forthcoming Eastern tennis tournaments, including the America vs. England matches for the Wightman cup which will be held in August at Forest Hills. She will play doubles with Miss Helen Wills, national singles champion.

Almost Starving

Helping Hand Editor:

I am writing about an ex-service man and his family. He has worried only two months in two years owing to wound received in France and his compensation has been stopped so that they are almost starving and haven't a cent to face the trouble ahead of them. They have five little ones to feed now and another expected next month, so won't you please for the sake of the little ones try to interest some of the kind readers in this case? The little mother is almost crazy from worrying. They must have some money by the 28th of this month or else be put out on the street, as they owe nearly 7 months rent. Mrs. A. V. B.

Much Sickness

Helping Hand Editor:

My husband has been sick for eleven weeks and is now in the hospital with a leaking heart valve and I have been laid up since January with blood poisoning in my arm caused by a splinter. I would like some clothing for my girl 12, and boy 10, also for myself, size 38, shoes 3½. I would be glad to get anything. MRS. J. O. I.

Needs of Others

Mrs. L. M. W., widow with four children, none old enough to work, would appreciate clothing for girls 13, and 12 and boys 11 and 4. Boys needs underwear, shoes and stockings and suit. Would also like toys for the baby and some children's books.

Mrs. W. K., young mother of two children, three months and two years of age, deserted by husband, asks for some help, such as clothing for them and herself, size 38, shoes 6½, and a baby carriage. he is not able to go to work.

Mrs. H. D. would appreciate an ice chest. Husband out of work and the little she does hardly buys enough to eat and pay the rent.

Mrs. B. would appreciate clothes for a girl, sixteen, and for herself, size 40. Latter needs house dresses badly.

Mrs. F. K., obliged to earn her own living, will board in the country an old person or sickly child. Good care and plenty to eat.

Mrs. M. I, widow with four children, boys, eleven and six, girls, eight and four, appeals for some work so she can give the children nourishing food.

Mrs. W. F. A., expecting stork soon, would appreciate some infant's clothing, nightgowns, underclothes and lungdlow aprons, size 40, for herself. Boy, two, also in need of clothes. Husband's pay too small to permit buying these things.

Mrs. F. B. would appreciate suit for husband, size 34, and for boy, five, a girl's coat, size 6, and so long that they can't get ahead.

RHYMING OPTIMIST

By Aline Michaelis.

GRACIOUS gifts life brings to us,
Heedless what we plead, kindly songs she sings to us, knowing well our need. We are children wandering in an unknown land, on its puzzles pondering. Fain to understand. Often we may ask of life boons we never gain, often many a task of life brings us care and pain. Childlike, we would take the ways fairest to our sight; always we forsake the ways touched by sorrow's blight. Childlike, we would plead for joy, asking sun and song that can quench this need for joy, ever keen and strong. But life's boons are many-hued as the sun's fires; there are gifts for any mood, matching all desires. Some are gifts of shining hours, some are dark indeed, so life fills these days of ours, knowing well our need.

MEDITATIONS OF A WIFE

By Helen Rowland

A HUSBAND, like a photograph, rarely does a woman justice—and almost never flatters her.

* * *

Some "weeks" which every wife advocates: Find-your-own-shoes week. Pick - up - your - Sunday - newspapers - week. Praise - the - cook - week. Come - to - the - table - promptly - week. Fewer - and - better - all-bis-week.

* * *

Helen Rowland

Before marriage, it takes kisses, explanations, flowers and persistence to effect a reconciliation with a woman; after marriage, a man expects to do it with a "There, there, now" and a pat on the back.

* * *

A woman regards a husband as the complement which will perfect her life; a man looks upon a wife merely as a supplement.

* * *

The average man's real emotions toward his wife are so deeply buried that she is forever starting a domestic earthquake just to try to bring them to the surface.

* * *

It is hard to tell these days whether it is more difficult to lure a man into a sentimental affair before marriage or to keep him out of one after marriage.

* * *

The strangest instinct which inspires a woman to call her husband up when he is supposed to be "working late at the office" is what she calls "premonition," he calls "suspicion," the psychologists call "intuition"—and her lawyer calls "wifely devotion."

* * *

I warned him that we were very comfortable in our room and then I said:

"By the way, have you a stork on your chimney?"

He shook his head sadly and said:

"No. We had a couple who lived here for years, but last Fall they went away."

"And they haven't returned?" I asked. "Perhaps they will come this Spring."

"I'm afraid not," said the Dutchman.

"Tell me why?" I asked.

"You know storks are very faithful couples," he said. "A male and a female stork make their nest and raise their family. Then they will go off in the Autumn together, but in the Spring will return together to the same nest."

"Is that so?" I exclaimed.

"Now this couple who lived on my chimney were different. They puzzled us for a long while. We couldn't make it out, because the male would migrate in the Winter but leave his wife here. That is very unusual, because they always go together. But he came back for three years to her, though. Finally I found out the reason. The mother stork had an injured wing and could not fly, so she remained in the nest throughout the Winter and waited for her mate to come back to her in the Spring. But the fourth year her wing must have been cured, for in the Autumn they both flew away together and have never come back."

"I suppose Mrs. Stork thought she had had enough of the northern Winters and wanted to stay South," said Bunny.

"Yes," I agreed, "and storks are such good husbands that I'll wager Mr. Stork agreed to stay South with her gladly. No wonder people like such happy couples living on their house tops."

MRS. STORK'S GOOD HUSBAND

By Foxy Grandpa

IT was for tulip-time, in Holland, that we journeyed to that tidy little country and how beautiful it was! Never in all my life have I seen so many or such beautiful tulips.

One of the first things which we noticed when we got into the town we were stopping for a few days was the presence of many nests on the chimneys of the neat little houses.

Upon seeing one of these big rough nests Bobby exclaimed:

"Foxy Grandpa, look up there. What kind of a nest is that?"

"Stork's," I replied.

Through the streets we walked to the small hotel where we were to make our headquarters. Between looking up at the storks on the housetops and turning around to look at the pretty little Dutch girls with their starched dresses and flaring white caps and wooden shoes Bobby was a busy boy.

After we had made arrangements for our rooms Bobby nudged me and asked:

"Do you think there is a stork's nest on the top of the house, Foxy Grandpa?"

"I'll ask the proprietor presently," I replied.

We unpacked our bags and came downstairs, where the prosperous looking Dutchman who was the hotel was smiling and waiting to see if we had found everything satisfactory.

I seized him that we were very comfortable in our room and then I said:

"By the way, have you a stork on your chimney?"

He shook his head sadly and said.

"No. We had a couple who lived here for years, but last Fall they went away."

"And they haven't returned?" I asked. "Perhaps they will come this Spring."

MEDBURY SAYS—

By John P. Medbury

THOUSANDS of bachelors all over the country are now doing their own washing. They like to have at least one shirt with a button on it.

THE laundries try to please, but they hire too many magicians. You send them a dull collar and they return one that's so sharp you can shave with it.

THEY also try to save you time with your socks. They send them back in such a condition that you can put them on from either end.

ONE woman complained about her underwear. She said the laundry didn't wash the holes.

HER husband used to send two union suits every week and they'd return table cloths.

HE said he wouldn't have minded the table cloths if they had sent an underwear pattern along with them.

THE laundries always give you more than your money's worth. If you send them a 14½ shirt they'll return a 15½.

A LAUNDRY bundle is like a telephone; you never know what numbers you're going to get.

IT wouldn't be fair to say that they tear your things, but one woman sent a sheet and got back lace.

SHE wouldn't have cared about the sheet, only her husband was a Ku Klux Klansman and he wanted to wear it to a meeting.

BUT it was torn so fancy he couldn't wear it without looking effeminate.

YOUVE got to give the laundries credit, they probably donate to every collection that's taken up. They must do something with our buttons.

ONE guy worked in a laundry for twelve years and got to be an admiral. He had charge of twenty-seven tubs.

NOT only that, but he has fifty-six destroyers working under him.

THE chances are they even used some of your shirts in target practice.

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, June 24—The carnival passerby often wonders how the huge private art salons in New York manage to survive. Save during an exhibition rarely is anyone seen in them except the opulent frock-coated salesmen who stand about in melancholy grandeur.

Yet all of them prosper and a few of the proprietors are millionaires. The art gallery is one place in New York where a sale is never forced. One may return again and again to view a picture without receiving a suggestion to purchase. It is a business psychology known nowhere save in the world of art. As one dealer said: "If a true lover of art wants a picture he will buy it eventually if he has to mortgage his home." Love of art is not always to be found in high places.

One of the most frequent visitors to the Fifth avenue salons is a chef in an italian table d'hote. He is a Florentine and all his off hours are spent roaming about galleries. His entire savings for 12 years recently went for an Innes.

Extremely rich men do not depend upon their own judgment in making purchases. They retain expert connoisseurs at high salaries who stock their galleries. These men scour America and Europe for pictures and the Orient for jades and porcelains.

The experienced art buyer is a careful purchaser. He knows how spurious paintings have deceived the most practiced eye, so even after he has decided on a purchase it may be a year before the deal is consummated. The nouveaux riche come in and says casually: "Send me a half dozen good pictures. Get them large before dinner. We are having company tonight."

Anyway it will be a great show to moths. White flannel trousers for gentlemen are declasse. Very! The boys with oiled hair who frequent seaside verandas are wearing yellow, green and even mauve colored pants instead of the conventional white. Erte, the Paris fashion designer, is said to have been the first to go in for colors.

In the Putnam Building on Broadway is an office with gilt letters on the door reading "Anti Dope League, Inc." It is a privately endowed organization which aims to stamp out use of narcotics among the people of the stage, screen and cabaret. It is claimed that around $80 of the reputed $90,000 "dope

UNHEARD SPEECHES

By Nat N. Dorfman

LISTEN, boys. The enemy is too close to our lines for any of you to venture out. I understand they are in ambush and ready to shoot down any of our men who show their heads. I have an order from general headquarters, however, for me to send one brave soldier into the enemy camps as a scout. It means certain death. It is risky business and I don't want any of you killed. Since I'm your general and since it is up to your superior officers to set an example of bravery, I'll take the chance myself!"

"I'm afraid I can't accept this role. It is far too good for one of my lowly talents. Just give me a job with one line to speak and my histrionic ambition will be fulfilled!"

"Him, fishing on Sunday, oh? Well, my boy, it's a darn fine sport and I'm glad to see you out so early in the morning. I'm sure you can be sure as minister of your church I won't breathe a word of this to your father!"

"You want a shine, boss? What for? Your shoes look well shined to me. Save your money today and come in again tomorrow, when you might really need a shine!"

BOSTON RADIO AMERICAN

VOICING THE GREAT AMERICAN DEMOCRACY OF THE YEAR

LOCAL RADIO TONIGHT

The very spirit of old France is to be caught and held in a program to be broadcast direct from the Seville Restaurant by Station WNAC, the Shepard Stores, on Wednesday at 8:15 p. m. This broadcast will be from the banquet of the St. John the Baptist Society of Boston.

The program, which will be in French, will include some of the best known songs of that country. A concert will be given by the augmented Aubler Orchestra, under the direction of J. Aubler. This orchestra will play, among its many selections, Phillo's "Jeanne d'Arc" and "La Marseillaise."

Such artists as Mlle Marguerite Lalberte, soprano, and M. Camille Giroard, baritone, will sing in their native tongue. Two addresses, the first by Albert Frechette, chairman of the committee on organization, and the second by J. Arthur Prescott, will be delivered. A number of toasts with their responses are to be part of this program.

COPS CONTRIBUTE TO EVENING

The "Singing Cops," otherwise known as the Lynn Police Quartette, will be heard tonight in a half-hour program from WEEI. These singing guardians of the law will forsake their duties of directing traffic and chasing away crime for a thirty-minute period before the microphone.

Marguerite LeMaire, the English mezzo soprano, will broadcast a concert of folk songs with interpretative talks from 9:45 until 10:30 p. m. tonight over Station WIGZ.

Her repertoire is representative of many schools. She has studied the songs of the British Isles and her talks dealing with the music of the different families and races found in the islands are interesting and entertaining interpretations.

At 7:30 o'clock members of the WIGZ Radio Nature League will tune in their receivers for the weekly nature talk by Thornton W. Burgess, noted author and naturalist, and director of the league which has accomplished much in the preservation of wild life in America.

MORNING WATCH POPULAR.

The "Morning Watch!" as radio feature that has become very popular since it was inaugurated on April 6 by Station WEEI under the auspices of the Boston Y. M. C. A. and which is now being copied in other cities of this country, has been suspended during the warm weather, but will be resumed on Sept. 28.

BOSTON, WEDNESDAY, JUNE 24, 1925

BOSTON EVENING AMERICAN

News of the British assault at Lexington reached Haverhill in the afternoon of April 19, 1775. Before evening, one hundred and five Haverhill Minute Men were on the march to Cambridge!

Admittedly skilled in production, some experts hold that the New England shoe industry has been lacking in merchandising ability. Haverhill's new community movement is a shoe-selling enterprise.

Haverhill's Minute Men of 1925 Vote, as Forefathers Voted in 1690, to 'Hold Fast!'

WHEN FOUR HUNDRED business and professional men of Haverhill came together a night or two ago in the City Hall, and within a half-hour subscribed $6,000 to the fund with which the world is to be told of Haverhill's ability and readiness to shoe the universe, History was merely repeating itself.

For Haverhill has battled with the glooms before, and more than once, and on every occasion has routed them most completely and has come on to new triumphs and greater profits.

There was a time, indeed, back in the early days of the settlement, when the people of Haverhill seriously contemplated quitting.

In those days the question appears to have arisen in the mind of every man in Haverhill whether it was all worth while, whether the game was worth the candle.

Haverhill's Age of Terror

On the twenty-fourth day of March, in the year 1690, a meeting of the inhabitants of the then little Haverhill was called to "consider what is to be done for the present security of the place against the enemy, by sending for help abroad, or to draw off."

"Drawing off" would have meant to abandon the town entirely, seeking safety in some less exposed place.

And what did the people of Haverhill do? What was their vote?

They placed the matter in the hands of the Selectmen, with "full powers in all respects."

And the Selectmen?

They were stand-patters and in their bright lexicon there was no such word as "quit." They wouldn't have known HOW to quit.

They "appointed" six garrisons and four houses of refuge. As the historian relates it:

It was truly an age of terror with these hardy and courageous men. Their descendants can have but a faint idea of the difficulties they encountered and of the dangers that continually hung over their heads, threatening every moment to overwhelm them. Almost every man in town was a soldier and many who lived in remote parts moved with their families into the neighborhood of a garrison or a house of refuge.

In those days the enemy was the red man and his weapons the tomahawk and the scalping knife.

Problem of the Shoe Towns

Today's troubles are of another variety altogether, but if they are to be surmounted, if the community is to rise victorious, if there is to be no "drawing off," the demand upon the manhood of Haverhill is for an exhibition of precisely the same degree of courage the forefathers displayed two hundred and thirty-five years ago.

WILL the modern Haverhill show such courage? CAN it show it?

It IS showing it!

And that problem is this: That the capacity of the shoe factories of the United States is 620,000,000 pairs of shoes a year, while the normal consumption of shoes is 325,000,000 pairs.

It is, as Everit B. Terhune of the Boot and Shoe Recorder told this meeting of Haverhill boosters, the old case of the 40 hungry men and the 20 plates of food. Some one may have to be satisfied with only half a plateful.

"Wanted—Merchandising Ability"

The situation, Mr. Terhune feels, calls for "better merchandising."

New England always has been skilled in production, but—in general—lacking in merchandising ability.

Production is NOT the great problem today, while merchandising is of inestimable importance.

We were originally mechanics, and while New England grew on its ability to produce, St. Louis, out in the Middle West, built up an industry on a shoe-SELLING basis. St. Louis today has a tremendous advantage in knowing how to SELL shoes.

New England must solve this problem. Shoes must be merchandised properly.

And, strangely enough, in view of the red-hot discussion which had been going on in Haverhill for several months, the people of Haverhill appear today to be agreed that Mr. Terhune has hit the nail on the head and that the great Haverhill need of the hour is merchandising with imagination, individuality and romance in it—"atmosphere!"

Haverhill had been going at the problem from entirely different angles. Every community club in the city, and each ward has its own community club, had been holding open forums. The question quite generally was, "What's the matter with Haverhill?"

If tonight the answer was that the shoeworker wanted too much for too little, tomorrow night an orator came along to tell the neighbors that the trouble was the goshawful greediness of the shoe manufacturer, who expected to enjoy forever the swollen profits of the war years and ride around in two imported motor cars at once.

When this sort of thing had been going on for several months—and getting nobody anywhere, much less doing Haverhill any appreciable good—a bright young man in the Shoe Manufacturers' Association was struck by a good idea.

This young man is Everett Bradley, and his idea was that now is the time for all good Haverhill men to come to the aid of the city and GO OUT AND SELL HAVERHILL SHOES.

"Well," said Everett Bradley, "what IS the matter with us? We've got the factories, and we've got the workmen, skilled workmen, born to the business, grown up in it, trained in it. We make, think, talk and dream shoes, as one community. There isn't a reason in the world why we should not be able to merchandise them!"

Mr. Bradley, at 34 the general manager of the Bradley Shoe Company, talked the matter over with President E. M. Rickard of the Manufacturers' Association and was directed to go ahead.

The Shoe and Leather Fair, a great style show exclusively for the trade, will be held in Mechanics Building, Boston, on July 7, 8 and 9; and the Haverhill manufacturers already had reserved 30 booths there.

Success at the show, Mr. Bradley argued, will be success not merely for the shoe manufacturer and his employes, but for all Haverhill. Why was not this a community enterprise?

He addressed that question to the Kiwanis Club and they answered that it IS a community enterprise. He went in turn to the Lions, the Rotary Club, the associated Community Clubs and the Chamber of Commerce, and he received the same reply.

Out of this general agreement was born the boosters' banquet, presided over by Mayor Fred D. McGregor and attended by 400 merchants, realtors, utility executives, doctors, lawyers and craftsmen in many lines of industry.

The manufacturers, with the Shoe and Leather Fair as an objective, already had raised $6,000.

The banqueters voted to subscribe as much more, and with something like Liberty Loan enthusiasm overshot the mark by $170. The money still is coming in!

AT THE "PLACE OF THE WINDING RIVER"

The site of the present city of Haverhill was known to the Indians, Pennacooks of the tribe of Passaconnaway, as Pentucket, or the "place of the winding river." Settled by the first few adventurers in 1640, Haverhill for nearly seventy years was a frontier town, surrounded by an immense and mostly unexplored forest.

One of the most notable monuments in this Shoe City of Northern Essex is that erected in City Hall Park to the memory of Hannah Duston, a heroine of Colonial days, and the only white woman known to have killed any considerable number of Indians with her own hands.

Her baby torn from her breast and killed by being dashed against a tree, Mrs. Duston on March 15, 1697, was taken captive by the Indians and removed to an island in the Merrimac at Pennacook, now Concord, N. H.

In the night of April 29th, in the same year, assisted by Mary Neff and Samuel Lennderson, she killed ten of the twelve savages, and, taking their scalps as trophies, "embarked on the waters of the Merrimac and after much suffering arrived at her home in safety."

"Selling" Haverhill to America

Of the more than $12,000 already in hand, about $1,500 will be expended in the "trade" press, by Haverhill AS A COMMUNITY.

Two thousand dollars more will be paid for the printing and mailing of a series of four letters, which will go out before the opening of the Shoe and Leather Fair to the 5,000 retail shoe merchants of the United States and Canada.

The first of these letters will be written and signed by Mayor McGregor, who away from the City Hall is one of Haverhill's leading retailers. The second will bear the signature of President George Hurn of the Chamber of Commerce, youthful manager of the Haverhill Electric Company; the third, that of President Rickard of the Shoe Manufacturers, and the fourth the combined signatures of officers of the Rotary, Kiwanis and Lions clubs.

Such a series of letters is counted upon to make an impression upon at least a large proportion of the 5,000 retail shoe merchants. Doubtless it will make such an impression. Anyhow, isn't it worth trying? Isn't it better than imitating Mr. Micawber? And isn't it a million times better than calling names?

"Sing a Song of Haverhill"

The prettiest girls in Haverhill will be asked to act as style models at the fair. Haverhill will send down its own quartet and its own orchestra. There will be money for entertaining, and it is not impossible that shoe buyers from every State in the Union will be brought to Haverhill—as was done in 1870 when the town became a city—and entertained at one of the suburban resorts.

It is Haverhill's pride and boast that the average retailer can here obtain his entire stock, for the city's range is between shoes which sell at $1.50 the pair and those which command $8.00.

Cutters' Local No. 7 and Stitchers' Local No. 10, subordinate bodies of the Shoe Workers' Protective Union, were represented at the community banquet and, notwithstanding the rough going of the past few months, went high upon the honor roll for substantial amounts.

The banqueters sang a lively song, which went something like this:

H-A-V-E-R-H-I-L-L spells Haverhill,
Don't sit down and simply be a "rooster,"
Stir yourself, and learn to be a
Booster, booster;
H-A-V-E-R-H-I-L-L, I say,
First you spell it, then you yell it,
Then go out and try to sell it,
Miss Haverhill—Hooray!

Well, it MAY be possible to whip a city of New Englanders who can come together in this spirit after one, two or three years of slackened industry, but it is hard to believe.

The Proper Spirit

It may be possible that the community that refused to quit before the savage, with his tomahawk and his scalping knife, will meekly back away from Business Competition—but that is hard to believe, too.

We can think of no finer example of community co-operation, no more inspiring exhibition of community courage and New England grit, than this determination of all the people of Haverhill, lawyer, doctor, merchant, realty owner and skilled craftsman, to get aggressively behind the manufacturers of the city in their campaign to sell Haverhill and the product of Haverhill to the retail shoe dealers of the country.

There must be in this Haverhill program at least a suggestion to other industrial communities.

How is it with YOUR town or city?

Are the folks sitting around talking "business slump," and blaming one another for it?

Hasn't there been talk enough, and isn't it time for ACTION?

The Haverhill movement is BOUND to succeed.

Such a city and such a people DESERVE success.
